JOHN SQUIRRELL: A FARMER AND STOREKEEPER WHO MINED (BRIEFLY) AT TE AROHA

Philip Hart

Te Aroha Mining District Working Papers
No. 157
Revised on August 4, 2017

Historical Research Unit
Faculty of Arts & Social Sciences
The University of Waikato
Private Bag 3105
Hamilton, New Zealand

ISSN: 2463-6266
Abstract: An English merchant’s clerk, some years after his wife’s death John Squirrell brought his sister and daughters to New Zealand to settle in the new Shaftesbury settlement, upriver from Te Aroha. His letters to English relatives provided details of their experiments with growing a variety of produce, which they sold locally or sent to the Auckland. He also took over a store, running it with the assistance of one of his daughters and struggling to obtain payment from customers before refusing to sell on credit. A leading member of the small Shaftesbury community, he did his best to assist its development.

In 1888 a blacksmith and sometime miner, James Munro, convinced him to prospect ground in the Tui portion of the goldfield. Again, his letters provided details of their amateur and short-term, unprofitable efforts; lacking capital to open up their ground, it was soon abandoned. His investments in Waiorongomai mines were equally unprofitable.

In 1892 Squirrell acquired land at another settlement, at Gordon, further upriver. He struggled to develop this farm, and was involved in conflicts with other members of the settlement, especially after he became secretary of the association. He continued to farm elsewhere, and became involved in early dairy companies, again becoming caught up in controversy.

A man holding strong opinions on a variety of topics, and very willing to express them, he regarded himself as a radical but opposed the Liberal Government. In his personal life he had to cope with two daughters suffering from mental problems, one of them being admitted to the asylum. He spent all his life attempting to provide for his family, only attaining a modest standard of living.

PART ONE: ENGLAND

FAMILY BACKGROUND

John Squirrell was born in December 1840, in Stowmarket in Suffolk, to John, a tailor, and Harriet, née Squirrell, of nearby Bildeston, daughter of William, presumably a relative of her husband’s father, another John. Squirrell’s father had been born in 1809, and his mother five years previously. After their marriage at Bildeston in August 1832, they had seven children: Pleasance Martha, born in March 1833; Rosa Anna, born in February 1835; Frances Naomi, born in 1837, who died in 1841; Jane Dinah, born in 1839; John, born in December 1840; Harriet Esther, born in 1842; and Mary Sophia, born in 1847 and who died in 1848. All except their last child, who was born and died in London, were born at Stowmarket. Both parents would die at Cavendish Square, London: his father in 1867 and his mother in 1880.¹

In a diary, kept erratically for most of his life after he settled in London, Squirrell listed some of the schools he had attended. In 1850, when aged nine, he was at the Craven School.² After being at ‘Mr Ward’s School’ from October 1851 to December 1854 and then ‘Dr Pope’s School’ from January 1854 to July 1855, he returned to the Craven School and seemingly concluded his education there at an unknown date after July 1857.³ As a young man he continued to educate himself, attending lectures and visiting museums and exhibitions.⁴

In December 1861, his diary described a fall-out with his father:
‘Resigned my membership in Keppel St Class on acct. of Father’s misrepresentation of my conduct there. Ordered by him to leave the house on my arrival at home, declined to do so unless I had written notice, on the ground of being a lodger’.⁵ No further details were recorded of this obscure squabble, and as there was no mention of his seeking a new place to live it seems to have been resolved. There is no other mention of his parents in his diary, but the significance of this omission is not known; it was very sketchy most of the time.

OCCUPATIONS

¹ Birth Certificate of John Squirrell, 7 December 1840, vol. xii, p. 44, Stow 1, General
Register Office, Merseyside, England; Death Certificates of Pleasance Martha [recorded as Martha Pleasance] Squirrell, 10 September 1894, 1894/3953; John Squirrell, 5 August 1924, 1924/5244, BDM; W.F. Bradley to Gilbert Archey (Director, Auckland Institute), 16
July 1957, MS 288, Library of the Auckland Institute and War Memorial Museum; The Squirrell Research Group website; ancestry.co.uk.
² John Squirrell, diary, p. 2, Hawkins Family Papers.
³ John Squirrell, diary, pp. 2-3, Hawkins Family Papers.
⁴ For example, John Squirrell, diary, entries for 18 November, 26, 27, 30 December 1862, 24 November 1863, Hawkins Family Papers.
⁵ John Squirrell, diary, entry for 10 December 1861, Hawkins Family Papers.
According to his obituary, based presumably on family legend, Squirrell had worked in the Bank of England; according to his wife’s death certificate and his own account, he was a merchant’s clerk in London for 25 years.\(^6\) According to his diary, he had lived in London, near Oxford Circus, for 23 years,\(^7\) and he never worked in the Bank of England.

A diary entry for 18 February 1862 recorded ‘change’ at the company he was then working, F. & C. Palmer. A man who had been dismissed because of ‘reduction of expenditure’ told him ‘that I was to be the next in less than 6 months – resolved immediately to learn German’, clearly to improve his chances for working for a mercantile firm with an overseas office.\(^8\) On the following day he ‘resolved to get in a merchant’s office whether dismissed … or not’.\(^9\) On 13 August he wrote a letter ‘to F. & C. Palmer about leaving’. On the following day, ‘C[harles] Palmer said I was quite right what I said in my letter, he thought I ought to be doing something for myself, I was 21, & they could not do any more for me. I could stop as long as I liked & go when I got something’.\(^10\) After, presumably, seeking other employment, in late February 1863 he ‘inserted an advertisement in Public ledger (for 3 times) to see if that would get me a situation’. Later notes recorded that he had published the advertisement on three more occasions: ‘no result’.\(^11\)

In May 1863, ‘Mr F. Palmer complained about my not having done’ a particular paper (the nature of which was unclear) and ‘said it must be done in 7 days. I spoke to C. P[almer], promised to do it by giving up my dinner hour & stopping late, & finished by asking him for the usual 10£ rise for the remaining year, of which 7 months had gone. He said “all right, only set to work”’.\(^12\) Then in early June he asked for his quarterly cheque, but the one he received was £5 ‘short’. When he spoke on the next day to Charles Palmer, the latter ‘denied that he had promised as above [and] said he had

---

\(^7\) John Squirrell, diary, p. 2, Hawkins Family Papers.

\(^8\) John Squirrell, diary, entries for 18 February 1862, 13 August 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.

\(^9\) John Squirrell, diary, entry for 19 February 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.

\(^10\) John Squirrell, diary, entries for 13, 14 August 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.

\(^11\) John Squirrell, diary, entry for 23 February 1863, plus later notes, Hawkins Family Papers.

\(^12\) John Squirrell, diary, entry for 4 May 1863, Hawkins Family Papers [punctuation added].
overpaid me & should deduct [£]2.10.0 next quarter'. On 1 August he recorded that a new firm, F.W. Palmer, had been formed after the original partners parted. On 10 September there was another discussion about his remuneration:

Recd Cheque all right making up the usual 10£ rise for the whole year. F.W. P. said it should go on at 90£ for six mos. I wrote to him next day for £100 from that time, being a £20 rise. He said that he was not sure he could not do without me. I said I did not think he could, he said he must think about it.

The outcome, three months later, was unsatisfactory:

Succeeded in getting £25 from F.W. Palmer as I had written for. After some argument Mr Palmer said that was the highest he could go to. I told him I should not stop at that only for a year, he said many did stop & many got less, I said I expected always to improve & not to stop at any thing, certainly not at 100 a year, so he said, if I should not stop & if I had such ideas, he did not wish to be in my way & he thought I had better look for something at once, so we agreed to go on for three months, only at same Rate. Poor Stephen [was] awful bad when he saw the cheque book, said it was a mistake & he should speak to Mr Palmer, he knew it was a mistake because Mr P had told him at Brighton that I should not have it, & so I found out that the Brighton conference was to discuss with my greatest enemy the letter I had written. No wonder he had decided not to accede to my request.

The remainder of this diary entry was crossed out, making it illegible. After spending two months in Germany because of his interest in the conflict over Schleswig-Holstein, he returned in early May 1864 to find he ‘was nearly two months out of a situation owing apparently to the Prussian & Danish war & my trying to get in German offices only, also probably that the eldest Mr Palmer did not speak up for me to some who enquired’. He immediately tried ‘to get a situation’. For a time he was unable to leave London ‘for fear of losing a situation which might turn up any day’. Then, on 6 July, he recorded a new development:

13 John Squirrell, diary, entry for ‘abt’ 10 June 1863, Hawkins Family Papers.
14 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 1 August 1863, Hawkins Family Papers [punctuation added].
15 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 10 September 1863, Hawkins Family Papers.
16 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 11 December 1863, Hawkins Family Papers [punctuation added].
17 John Squirrell, diary, entry after 15 May 1864, Hawkins Family Papers.
18 John Squirrell, diary, entry after 28 June 1864, Hawkins Family Papers.
At last by answering an advertisement I succeeded in getting in with Mr P.J. Waite, 21 Mincing Lane, Merchant, to begin on the 7 July, Thursday, @ £80 a year (?) & double for overtime. After the first week the top clerk & another left, the latter (Coale, perhaps only temporarily). This I got without the assistance of F.W. Palmer, by getting a capital character from Charles Palmer, who said he was on the point of writing for me to go to him for a short time.\(^{19}\)

The question mark suggests he was uncertain whether he had been promised this precise amount. At the end of that month there was an office drama:

July 30/64 Sat. £1 taken from the Cash Box at the Office. Since the night before Glenison made a great fuss when I spoke about it and I strongly suspected him & communicated my suspicion to Mr Waite, a cross examination [was] held in which G. confused himself & answered falsely.

Aug 4/64. Mr Glenison did not arrive at the office. On telling Mr Waite this he asked who had taken the 50£ Cheque to the post for L[iver]pool the evening before. It was him. Telegraphed to L’pool – not arrived – sent Mr Clark to fetch him, who went roughly & threatened police if he did not come, he found him in bed (? just got there). Got up & came with his wife. In the meantime a letter came to Mr Lamb which we knew as G’s writing, though seemingly disguised, to tell him to meet him next morning at the Office before [it opened?] & say what Waite said about him, also to tell W. that he looked very ill the day before & not to say any thing about it to his wife. He wrote at the same time to Waite saying he had suffered with spasms & could not come. Just before he arrived a telegram came to say it [the cheque] had come rightly to hand. Mr Waite asked G’s wife if she knew Lamb, she said, “Yes, to her cost, & that he was a very bad fellow & she was surprised that Mr Waite had him in the office” (? Was she any good herself).

Aug 8. My place very stormy. Waite fetched Macpherson (age ? abt 35) to be top [clerk]. Mac. soon lost 10/- or 15/- & made an awful mull [muddle] in St Petersburg till I had to tell him a great deal.

Aug 14. He (Mr Waite) asked me if I should like to be kicked out of the office because Hepworth had been waiting on him, & could not go somewhere at once with a letter I gave him, of course I take no notice of all his speeches & in 2 minutes he is quite civil again.\(^{21}\)

Enough was soon enough, as shown by his entries for October, commencing with 4 October:

---

\(^{19}\) ‘Him’ underlined twice in the original.

\(^{20}\) John Squirrell, diary, entry for 6 July 1864, Hawkins Family Papers.

\(^{21}\) John Squirrell, diary, entries for 30 July, 4, 8, 14 August 1864, Hawkins Family Papers [punctuation added].
This day I was engaged by Messrs Crawford Colvin & Co at £90 per annum – he said £80, I said I would take it, but had hoped for £100. He said the clerk before me had that sum but after consultation agreed to give me £90. Mr Young had tried for some time to get me the place, at last he got permission for me to see Mr Nelson, but he said he wanted first class writing and mine was not good enough. He asked me to send him another specimen, which I promised to do, but afterward wrote a letter saying I thought it would be better to decline the place as I could not fulfill his wishes. I thought I would just see Mr Young before I posted the letter - & he spoke so encouragingly of my prospect of obtaining it that I decided to do what Mr Nelson asked me and I managed to write so well that they were satisfied. Mr Waite became much more civil & would not give me any more notices, so I don’t know what I shall do today as it is my Last day.

Sat. Oct 8th as P.J.W. was going away I said I wanted to have a word with him – he said he wished I had spoken before. I said I only wanted him to conclude his engagement with me, that I had hardly anything to do, & it was no use to either of us my stopping. He said if I wished to go it must be so & went. I had only 2 days due to me which I took from the Petty Cash, balanced it up & handed it over to one of the clerks –

On Monday morning 10 Oct/64 I went to Messrs Crawford Colvin & Co. In the evening I went to see if I could do anything for P.J.W. When I got [there] the clerk asked if I had rec[eived] a letter, I asked what about – to know why I did not come that morning. I said where is Mr Waite, they said in his private room. I walked in [and] said I had come to ask if there was anything they wished to ask me & I was very much surprised to hear he had written for me. He said, of course, what did I mean by not coming, where had I been all day? I told him the reason was that he had not given me leave to go on Saturday, & I could not come back. He said I must give him a month’s notice, I said there was no need, he had given me six and I had a list of them. He said I had taken no notice of them at the time, I said I took them now. He threatened to kick me out. I said if he wanted to be nasty about it I would give him a lawyer’s name. He said again he wanted [to] kick me out of the counting house; I said “very well that will do” and turned round & walked out, shutting him in. I asked the clerks if there was anything I could tell them. They asked me about several things & then I walked off, saying I had done with Mr Waite.

When I got to Camden Town I found letter inquiring why I was not at the office & wishing [for] an early explanation of my absence. Heard no more from him. Met a clerk some days after, who said he [Waite] complained to some one that his “produce clerk had left him quite suddenly” ----

Oct 24th. Get on very well at my new place. Have not yet discovered all the partners’ names…. This place is likely to be a certainty.22

And so it proved: after having worked for Waite for only three months, he retained his new position for 14 years. In April 1872 his salary was 22 John Squirrel, diary, entries for 4, 8, 10, 24 October 1864, Hawkins Family Papers [punctuation added].

increased to £140.

Then, from 1 April 1878 until 6 July 1881, he was employed by Power Bros & Co., of Bishopsgate Street, London, a firm specializing in the American grain trade.

RELIGION

In April 1861, his diary recorded his attending Park Chapel, and two months he wrote to ‘Mr Harrison’ about joining it; they met in June. After discussions with other chapel members, was ‘Reed into the Church’ on 1 August. From then on, he attended its services, social events, and quarterly members’ meetings. He noted the content of some of the sermons preached, and also recorded details of particularly interesting addresses given to the Park Chapel Young Men’s Christian Institution. After quarterly members’ meetings he noted the arguments made on both spiritual and practical issues.

In May 1862 he attended a lecture on ‘Nonconformity in 1662 & 1862’. Later that month, at a large Evangelical meeting in Exeter Hall, he took detailed notes of the speeches of visiting French Protestants:

M de Faye of Lyon spoke of the attempts of the government to suppress their little church consisting of about 80 members. It was suppressed by a court held for the purpose of buying [it] but it continued to meet & [at] last ventured to put a board out with the words “Chapelle Evangélique.” When the authorities immediately wrote to the press in the most alarming manner, M Faye said it was as though the whole kingdom would be overthrown by the putting out of their board. The church has to pay 900 francs a year to govt. Lyons [is] the great seat of Mariolatry [with] statue of Mary on a high

---

24 John Squirrell, diary, p. 4, Hawkins Family Papers.
26 John Squirrell, diary, entries for 21 April, 19, 23 June 1861, Hawkins Family Papers.
27 John Squirrell, diary, entries for 4, 21 July, 1 August 1861, Hawkins Family Papers.
28 For example, John Squirrell, diary, entries for 12, 15 September, 12 December 1861, Hawkins Family Papers.
29 For example, John Squirrell, diary, entries for 13, 20 July, 7 September, 2, 5 October 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.
30 For example, John Squirrell, diary, entries for 10, 21 October, 11 November, 16 December 1861, 10 November 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.
31 For example, John Squirrell, diary, entry for 12 June 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.
32 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 6 May 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.
hill above the town. M Faye asked a man whom he met what it was for, he said she had protected the town from the plague & the cholera, her image being carried round by the priests. The late inundations however were on account of the want of faith in the people. He asked the man why she was put up in the clouds - he said he was queen of heaven & the clouds were her footstool. He then asked him what that chain was for that came from the statue down the side of the hill - he said a lightning conductor. He asked how it was she required a conductor to protect her from lightning if she was Queen of heaven – the man could not answer that question. M Bersier said the great evil in France was Pantheism. M de Pressencé said in his speech [delivered in French] that a great struggle was coming with infidelity.33

As usual, Squirrell did not comment on these speeches in his diary, but it may be assumed, by the fact that so much detail was recorded that he agreed with the anti-Catholic sentiments expressed. Four days later he ‘Resolved to give one tenth part of all receipts every year (salary, interest on money, profits on books &c &c) to God’.34

On one Sunday evening in September 1862, along with another man he attended two religious meetings, the first a Baptist ‘Tabernacle Feast’; as the sermon was summarized in his diary, he took it seriously. Not so the second one:

Coming back, looked in to a Mormonite meeting. The preacher said there was a real prophet now living on the earth, his name was Brigham Young. Said the object of Mormonism was to raise people to make them pure & Good. Another man prayed to God in the name of Jesus & finally they sung “Praise God from whom all blessings flow.” We did not join in it, but stood close to the door.35

In November 1863 he recorded a theological argument:

Called on Mr Shipton, discussion for about 1 hour & a quarter, principally on the Personality of the Holy Spirit, Mr S. arguing for a sep[arate] person, I affirming that the Spirit was the spirit of God & of Jesus Christ, viz their influence & power as apart from themselves (see letter to him). Mr Udall coming in, Mr S called him to the rescue: “Do you believe in the Personality of the Holy Spirit?” “Certainly.” “On what grounds do you believe it?” Mr U rubbed his head with his hands & considered: “Well really I have never thought on the subject”, he was quite unprepared with any defence, only he had always believed it, because he said it is in the Bible. I could not help laughing at his confusion. After Mr Mason was brought against me, all three 33 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 15 May 1862, Hawkins Family Papers [punctuation added].

34 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 19 May 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.
35 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 14 September 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.
at once, & I had enough to do. Most of the texts produced answered my purpose better than theirs. They came to the conclusion that we should never agree, & thought I had better think of it, & study the matter more. I came to the conclusion that Mr Shipton was a very good tempered man, as he did not get out of temper, although he hinted at last that we might get too warm, not at all likely on my part, in theology.\textsuperscript{36}

An entry for January 1868 gave a very full account of his personal faith:

Last of a series of discussions at [the] Gordon Square “Catholic Apostolic Church” with one of the officials there (a young man, probably not much if any older than myself). I had been there on three occasions last year (1866) in Decr. The subjects then of the sermons were “Behold I stand at the door & knock,,” “Not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing,” “And we shall reign on the earth.” Went again on various occasions in 1867. On one occasion took [his wife] Maria. Lastly when I went on Decr 15th I was accosted coming out by a young man, who asked me if I had any question to ask respecting their worship &c, and to put matters straight at once I told him that I was a member of a Congregational Church but that I liked to come there occasionally as I enjoyed their worship very much although conducted in a very different manner to that which I was accustomed to. We then got into a conversational argument on the Millennium – which he said was a bodily reign of Christ on earth, to commence shortly,” but which I said was a spiritual reign, affirming that Christ took a body that he might suffer & die therein but that having done his work he would never assume a body again as it would be a second humiliation.

On three subsequent occasions the arguments were resumed between us, comprising a great many subjects – The Trinity – The Sacraments – The resurrection of the Body – The everlasting duration of punishment - The matters relating to their form of Church government – Heaven – The resurrection – What constituted a Christian – The Church – Reason & Faith &c &c. The principal argument was on Baptism (by water), which he maintained was the commencement & cause of Christian life in the Soul, whereas I maintained that no ceremony was necessary to make a Christian, that it was an inward change of heart effected by the Spirit of God in answer to prayers, and declared myself a Christian who had never been sprinkled in infancy nor immersed on joining the church. I affirmed that there was not three Gods but two, Father & Son, that the Spirit was the power & influence proceeding from them – that sprinkling or immersion were unnecessary to salvation & bore no part in producing it and were only acceptable in so far as those who believed in them practiced them as believing they fulfilled God’s commands – that there would never be any resurrection of the Body – that ultimately Christ would wrest every soul from the hands of Satan – that Heaven was not merely this earth done up anew – That a Christian was not merely a baptized (with water) person but a follower of Christ – that the Church of Christ was composed of all who loved & followed him

\textsuperscript{36} John Squirrell, diary, entry for 23 November 1863, Hawkins Family Papers [punctuation added].
throughout the world – that we could only believe what was first understood, that reason must go before faith & faith could only be founded on knowledge, that this earth would not be the final abode of departed spirits but a large place where the inhabitants of the whole universe would meet. He gave me up at last, said he should like me to come in the week & speak with those better able to argue these matters than he was, but I said I would not intrude myself farther upon them, except that I was always ready to speak. Going out I said to him, “You told me that you had the bread & wine here in a Tabernacle”, he said “yes” & lifted up the curtain that I might see it. I said, “So you do not believe that Jesus is ascended & sitting at the right hand of God the Father?” He said, “Yes.” Then I said they should worship him spiritually, & not reverence any material substance, for that was Idolatry – this concluded we shook hands & parted.37

In 1876, at an unstated date a new church was established and communicants in the Park Chapel were invited by a Mr Critchley ‘to a preliminary meeting to discuss everything freely’ so that there would be no complaints later that things were not as they wished. Tried to find out the business beforehand but could obtain information. Found out that others had a paper sent them asking for their opinions &c – so at the meeting a printed statement of doctrine &c was produced which I had heard nothing of but which was supposed to be in accordance with the answers to the paper sent out. 2nd article “Trinity of persons in the Godhead”. Spoke against the word “Trinity.” (In the previous portion of this Scheme referring to the Church Government [I] spoke to have the words “Independent” changed to Congregational, not carried at the time but was afterwards printed so.) 4th Article – Everlasting Death. [I] spoke strongly against the eternity of future punishments, which resulted in Mr Critchley saying: “I cannot admit a universalist to this church,” whereupon having been excluded in anticipation I sat down, after repeating in the strongest terms my abhorrence at the idea of perpetual torment. The remaining articles were agreed to in silence, no one speaking, & the last article as to the perpetual obligation of ordinances being read, I rose to say that I should have liked to speak upon that as well as others, but the ground had been taken from under me that I felt that I had no further right to speak. Next Sunday a sermon was preached on the text “My people have committed 2 evils, they have been out for themselves & left me the fountain of living water, & have hewn out for themselves cisterns, broken cisterns, that will hold no water,” and the sermon [was] preached to heretics, young men puffed up with their knowledge & vanity – who wanted to be different from other people, despised the saints, calling them insipid – and after forming a little set in the church finally left it & went the downward way &c.

37 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 19 January 1868, Hawkins Family Papers [punctuation added].
Both the readings left off in the middle of the chapters at verses affirming eternal destruction, and the whole service seemed appointed to annihilate me once [and] for all. I did not attend the adjourned meeting, feeling that all liberty of speech was gone & if I was to be excluded I had no right there, knowing also that if I did speak I should fall foul of many other articles.
But when the time came for the admission of members I determined to ask for admission [so] that I might never be said to have not asked. Mr C. said I had excluded myself. I said, “No, on the contrary, I applied for admission.” He then suddenly withdrew all opposition, requiring only adhesion to one or two things. I said I must have liberty to deny or modify at least half of the articles in question. Full liberty [was] conceded and my name taken. I was very much astonished at the change – found out [later] that others agreed with me and perhaps have to be excluded, also that some persons had exerted themselves on my behalf & that the matter was discussed at the Blackheath committee.38

In an appendix to his diary, Squirrell recorded an ‘anecdote of Palissy’, a Huguenot, which clearly applied to his own views on religious (and political) freedom: ‘The King of France told him if he did not turn Catholic he should be compelled to burn him. “You are a King,” said he, “& you say compelled. I cannot be compelled to do any thing my conscience disapproves” ’.39

SUNDAY SCHOOL

In March 1862, Squirrell recorded attending an ‘Old Scholars’ Meeting’ of the Craven Chapel Sunday School, where he ‘saw some old friends I had not seen for 4 or 5 years’.40 He attended another such gathering in the following February and had a ‘very pleasant meeting’.41 His involvement in Sunday Schools had been renewed when, on a Sunday afternoon in June 1861, he attended the Park Chapel Sunday School.42 On 2 October that year, he recorded attending a Teacher’s Quarterly meeting, which amongst other issues discussed the ‘receiving in of new teachers, myself amongst them’.43 In the following February, he ‘went to assist’ a parents’ tea

38 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 1876, Hawkins Family Papers [punctuation added].
39 John Squirrell, diary, Appendix, Hawkins Family Papers [punctuation added].
40 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 5 March 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.
41 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 18 February 1863, Hawkins Family Papers.
42 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 23 June 1861, Hawkins Family Papers.
43 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 2 October 1861, Hawkins Family Papers.
meeting.\textsuperscript{44} When attending a quarterly meeting of the members of the chapel in June 1862, he noted some comments about the work of Sunday Schools. ‘Mr Deed spoke about our new school room, had no definite plan but [believed] the deacons would most likely have some [in the] next quarter, so we had better get our money ready’.\textsuperscript{45} In the following month, he attended another teachers’ meeting. ‘Papers read, written by female teachers, on the defects of Sunday Schools - principal one – a want of order & obedience. Conversation on the papers & other things relating to the subject afterwards, very nice meeting’.\textsuperscript{46}

In February 1863 he recorded another parents’ meeting: ‘capital speaking, crowded to choking’.\textsuperscript{47} Late that year, diary entries indicated his close friendship with one of the boys attending his classes:

\begin{quote}
Oct 25: Called on one of my scholars, Wm Douglas. Found that he had had the scarletina very bad & [was] hardly expected to live for some days. Could not see him.

Nov 2: Called again. He had the Scarlet Fever afterwards & then was taken with Dropsy. The mother said it was dangerous to see him, the doctor had been taken very bad, but as she said he might die at any moment I thought I would like to see him. He was almost unconscious, could just whisper my name, & stretched out his hand very slowly to me, was in very great pain; could only tell him I hoped he would soon be better, but don’t know whether he understood me….

Sunday Nov 8th: Heard when I got to school that dear Wm Douglas was dead; had died the Thursday before. Mr Doughty called after the school to tell me – said the mother was almost broken hearted & he hardly knew how to bear it. I told him that I was sure he was gone to heaven & that we must follow him there & then we should see him again. He asked for a copy of William’s report of good conduct, which had been mislaid, his mother wished it to be exactly [in] the same words.\textsuperscript{48}
\end{quote}

After visiting Germany in 1864, at a teachers’ meeting he ‘spoke about German Sunday Schools, & exhibited S.S. paper’.\textsuperscript{49}

\textbf{‘RAGGED SCHOOL’}

\textsuperscript{44}John Squirrel, diary, entry for 19 February 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.

\textsuperscript{45}John Squirrel, diary, entry for 12 June 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.

\textsuperscript{46}John Squirrel, diary, 9 July 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.

\textsuperscript{47}John Squirrel, diary, 25 February 1863, Hawkins Family Papers.

\textsuperscript{48}John Squirrel, diary, entries for 25 October, 2, 8 November 1863, Hawkins Family Papers [punctuation added].

\textsuperscript{49}John Squirrel, diary, entry for (?) 28 June 1864, Hawkins Family Papers.
In May 1862 he replaced another man as the teacher in a ‘Ragged School. Five boys, remarkably good, wanted to hear about Jack the Giant Killer. Told them about David & Goliath’. A later session had a ‘small attendance, only 2 or 3 turned out’. This is the only reference to his involvement in these schools for the poor.

YMCA

On 12 November 1861, his diary mentioned the Young Men’s Christian Association for the first time, when he attended a meeting at Exeter Hall to hear an address on ‘France & England eighty years ago’. In December he attended the same hall to hear a YMCA concert of ‘Church music ancient & modern times, Choir of 100 persons & organ’. In May 1863 he joined the Young Men’s Christian Association Literary Institute in Aldergate. That November he was invited to join the YMCA, and after having a theological debate with the person who had issued the invitation, he was formally accepted into it.

TEMPERANCE

In December 1861, Squirrell recorded attending a temperance meeting at the Mansion House. In the following May, he attended a large meeting held in Exeter Hall ‘called by National temperance league in connection with Ministerial conference; 12 ministers, 6 clergymen, 6 dissenters spoke’. He recorded in detail some of the speeches, presumably agreeing with their arguments. In September he attended a meeting at Exeter Hall of the ‘International Temperance & Prohibition Convention’, afterwards listing the speakers but not recording their arguments.

---

50 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 18 May 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.
51 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 12 November 1861, Hawkins Family Papers.
52 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 17 December 1861, Hawkins Family Papers.
53 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 15 May 1863, Hawkins Family Papers.
54 John Squirrell, diary, entries for 10, 23, 28 November 1863, Hawkins Family Papers.
55 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 19 December 1861, Hawkins Family Papers.
56 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 22 May 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.
57 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 3 September 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.
Squirrell’s diary included several mentions of current political events.\(^{58}\) In December 1861 he recorded opinions that had impressed him: ‘Discovered by reading review of Book by Mr J.S. Mill that to make a true republic minorities must be represented, adopted also the view of Non local suffrage - & multiplied votes to prevent waste of votes by non election of candidates first selected’.\(^{59}\) In the following March he recorded the announcement at a YMCA meeting ‘that an American gentleman named Peabody had offered £100,000 towards improving the dwellings of the poor in London (should have been £150,000)’.\(^{60}\) On the evening of Monday, 1 December 1862, at an evening class (the Park Chapel Young Men’s Christian Institution?), Squirrell gave his first formal lecture:

I spoke a little on Milton at the Class – his republican & anti-State Church principles. Quoted a piece from his writing about the title of King, Sovereign, Lord &c, which he says are “arrogancies or flatteries,” asked what he would have said to the Englishmen of the present day, who say “Our most gracious Sovereign Lady.” Trembled while I spoke very much, knowing that the majority was against me.\(^{61}\)

If his personal sentiments were opposed to the concept of royalty, they did not stop him joining the crush to see Princess Alexandra of Denmark arrive to marry the Prince of Wales and then going out on the following evening to admire the illuminations.\(^{62}\) In June 1864 he noted that leaders of the Protestant denominations had been ‘to the Queen to congratulate her about the Royal baby’, the first child of the Prince of Wales, and that the principal ones ‘had the Honour of kissing her Majesty’s hand’.\(^{63}\)

At a meeting of the Park Chapel Young Men’s Association held in November 1864, he seconded a resolution on ‘Party Reform’. He then spoke to the motion:

House of Comm[ons] elected by non-local suffrage. Character of Parliament reformed – H of C not to submit to tokens of inferior authority, \(^{58}\) For example, John Squirrell, entries for 8 January, 17, 18, 20 September, 21 October 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.

\(^{59}\) John Squirrell, diary, entry for 14 December 1861, Hawkins Family Papers.

\(^{60}\) John Squirrell, diary, entry for 21 March 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.

\(^{61}\) John Squirrell, diary, entry for 1 December 1862, Hawkins Family Papers [punctuation added].

\(^{62}\) John Squirrell, diary, entries for 7, 9 March 1863, Hawkins Family Papers.

\(^{63}\) John Squirrell, diary, entry for 28 June 1864, Hawkins Family Papers.
to be called & dismissed by a sovereign – it stands before the H of L comprised of Bishops & some nobles who have no nobility – The H of C should represent the people, the H of L the intellect of the Country –
My Reformed Parliament a senate of Veteran Politicians like Palm[eron], Russell, Vaughan, together with men of marked ability denoted by the Country through the Press & elected by the Commons to the Upper H. for life. Also a lower House of Reps by Universal Suffrage.
Such a Sen & H of R, with Ministry & Pres. of Ministers, to govern solely & to allow no one on pretence of superior blood & appeals to antiquated names & fictions to interfere with them.
Mr Lyons [said he was] glad such sentiments were never heard from any one else, all against me, even essayist. As a matter of course what I said much misrepresented in the Discussion, no chance of reply.
(see proof of speech forgot parts & spoilt it).

Was it for holding opinions like these that the following experience occurred on 7 September, which was written into his diary after this November entry?:

Attacked by a mob on Holborn Hill @ 1/4 to 10. Going home from Y.M.C.A., No. 1 knocked my hat in, No. 2 D[i]tto. The hat disappeared from my head, I seized it again, [and] a third man was just about to attack me when I struck [him] a tremendous blow in the face. After raising a few shouts of “murder” & “police” I bolted into a public house, the door of which stood just behind me, the infuriated mob following but the good people took my part firmly, let me in a back part of the bar & bolted the door. Two policemen soon came & then No. 3 became remarkably innocent.
His face all bleeding, he declared himself a harmless passenger whom I had assaulted, & declared he had nothing to do with it, although he came back after passing me to assault me. I gave my address to him & my friends made him give me his, a literary curiosity almost indecipherable. I was finally escorted up the hill by two policemen, the mob threatening, but they soon dispersed, all but the damaged one & a friend of his who dogged us. The policeman went some way & I then went off round middle row & so got away. I have some recollection of one [man] having a stick; the hat went out again after its knocking & I [was] not hurt at all.

He had another experience of violence two years later (precise date not recorded):

64 Identity of ‘essayist’ not identified.
65 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 28 November 1864, Hawkins Family Papers [punctuation added].
66 Should that be ‘Middle Row’?
67 This word uncertain because of handwriting.
68 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 7 September 1864, Hawkins Family Papers [punctuation added].
Reform Meeting in Hyde Park. Went at 6.30 [and] waited outside till abt 7.30. Saw Mr Beales come in a carriage. After a while the people, being tired of waiting outside, pushed the rails. I struggled & got away from the spot as I did not want to try which was the strongest, me or the rails, believing them to be very hard. Soon they went down & after a short struggle with the Police the people went in. The same had happened in other parts of the Park. Then I went in over the fallen rails, no sooner in than there was a charge of Cavalry & every one running away. Many men & boys threw stones at the Police & they kept charging & seizing some. The Cavalry made grand charges at nobody. At the first charge on their re-entering the Park a second time they came down the Path. I stood on the rails & called to those near me to stop there & cheer them & see if they would interfere; so we stood there, some fled. The gentleman next to me kept saying something about getting his eyes put out as they brandished their swords & flew down the path like mad men. I cheered vociferously & waved my hat & as one passed I saw him laughing considerably, they evidently thought it great fun. Soon after I saw a young man fill both hands with stones. I shouted to him to throw them down, he said he had suffered some grievance at the hands of the Police & he wanted to pay them back, but others joined with me & he had to drop them all. Came away about 9 o’cl. All London seemed out for the evening, all because the stupid Tory government had forbidden the meeting.69

Concerning European politics, he was decidedly on the side of the liberals and supported the rights of oppressed nations. For instance, in February 1864 he noted ‘the opening of the French Chamber after the elections, splendid speeches were made by Thiers, Jules Faure &c &c demanding Liberty’.70 On 25 November 1861, he attended an address on ‘Hungary, her wrongs and their remedies’, and contributed to the discussion:

I spoke first time against England for not helping Hungary, for restoring Bourbons, alliance with Napoleon [111], government did not represent the people. While they sympathized with Hungary, the government refused even moral support. Time coming when would be no despots, no aristocracy by blood, no nobility but that of merit, no might but the Right.71

In January 1864 he recorded a ‘Stir about Hungary. Kossuth had made a proclamation, on Christmas Eve, asserting that the time would soon come 69 John Squirrel, diary, entry for 1866 [no exact date given], Hawkins Family Papers [punctuation added].

70 John Squirrel, diary, entry for 1 February 1864, Hawkins Family Papers.
71 John Squirrel, diary, entry for 25 November 1861, Hawkins Family Papers [punctuation added].
for their freedom, that a committee of independence had been formed & they would act as a revolutionary government & that they would have all their decrees obeyed''.

In March 1862, at a YMCA meeting, ‘one of the speakers mentioned the proposal of Pres. Lincoln to abolish Slavery, the news of which had been received the day before – which elicited great cheering’.73 The following month, after attending a Good Friday concert performed by the Sunday Schools of London, he ‘walked there & back with Mr Mendez (from Bengal)’, presumably discussing events in India. As an illustration of his views on slavery and the racial issue, in July 1862, upon coming out of a Sunday School teachers’ meeting he met Mr Davis & the black minister, walked to his home with him. He was a slave but escaped & had been a minister for 30 years. Comes from America, is going to Africa as missionary to the natives. Complained of the coldness of Christians in England. I promised to go & see him at his home & also to give him 10/0 before he went, excused the coldness of others by telling him that there were so many other things to give to. Talked about the prejudice against colour, which he felt very much.75

In October that year, he recorded the news that President Lincoln had proclaimed the abolition of slavery, gave some of the terms offered to slave owners, and noted that this development was ‘generally condemned by the English Press’.76

In May 1862, he reported in considerable detail a lecture on ‘Garibaldi & Italy’ given by Jessie White Mario in the St James Hall; clearly he supported her views:

She said the Sardinian government had tried to keep back the work of Liberty all the way through, tried to prevent Garibaldi from landing in Sicily, then from going from Sicily to Naples. Described the battle of the Volturno, 18,000 against 75,000 – great victory. To prevent Garibaldi from marching further & delivering Rome & Venice, the King of Sardinia (Victor Emmanuel) sent an army with orders if necessary to give battle to Garibaldi. G & the King met, the King insisted upon his at once returning home to Caprera. Napoleon [111 was] the greatest enemy to Italian liberty & unity. Spoke of Mazzini as the great apostle of unity & liberty for Italy & head of

72 John Squirrell, diary, entry for January 1864, Hawkins Family Papers.
73 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 21 March 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.
74 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 18 April 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.
75 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 9 July 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.
76 John Squirrell, diary, entry for ‘abt’ 6 October 1862; see also 2 January 1863, Hawkins Family Papers.
the party of action with which she identified herself. She said the English should carry [on with] their idea of non-intervention & insist upon Napoleon leaving Rome. We must not say “Am I my brother’s keeper?” but we should give our strongest moral support to Italy. Spoke of the Roman republic of ’48 – Mazzini triumvir, Garibaldi general of the army of volunteers, 1800 in number, stood bravely against 30,000 French for 5 months.77

In August, he recorded hearing the news that Garibaldi’s second uprising in Sicily: ‘The Party of action against the Government of Victor Emmanuel and Ralazzi’.78 Subsequent diary entries recorded Napoleon’s 111’s response and Garibaldi’s defeat and capture.79 In 1866 he noted the conditions upon which the French troops evacuated Rome.80

In 1863, he supported the insurrection in Poland, and even ‘Sent 10/- to Poland’.81 In January the following year he noted that the ‘Polish Revolution or Insurrection [was] still continuing, & growing more cruel’.82

In November 1863 he became very interested in the crisis between Denmark and Prussia over Schleswig-Holstein, first attending a meeting where the speakers were English and then ‘the German meeting in the London Tavern’. (As the speeches at the latter were delivered in German, clearly he could understand this language.)

Mr Habel, a Holsteiner, spoke of their grievances under the Danish rule & how, in spite of all endeavour to make them Danes, they remained German. Proceedings more free & democratic than at [the] English meeting, behaviour of audience better, eloquent speeches, meeting finished with the singing of some hymn about Schleswig-Holstein.83

In the following January he gave details of the latest developments. ‘The Schleswig-Holstein question expected every moment to open war proceeding, the so called Federal executive84 having taken possession of Holstein & permitted everywhere a revolution in favour of Duke Frederick, & against the King of Denmark, he having only just acceded to the

---

77 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 27 May 1862, Hawkins Family Papers [punctuation added].
78 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 24 August 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.
79 John Squirrell, diary, entries for 27, 30 August, 1 September 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.
80 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 13 September 1886, Hawkins Family Papers.
81 John Squirrell, diary, entries for 26 January, 13 March, 1 April 1863, Hawkins Family Papers.
82 John Squirrell, diary, entry for January 1864, Hawkins Family Papers.
83 John Squirrell, diary, entry for January 1864, Hawkins Family Papers [punctuation added].
84 Written as ‘execution’.
throne’. On 1 February he recorded the latest developments: ‘War in Denmark between Austria & Prussia as two great powers & Denmark to compel Denmark to evacuate Schleswig. Sharp fighting & retreat of the Danes to Island of Alsen (Query only report). I have determined to go to Germany if nothing prevents when I leave Palmers’, where his employment was about to end. A ‘special diary’, now lost, recorded details of his two-month trip to Germany, whose cause he clearly supported. He left from London to Hamburg on 9 March, travelling on to Berlin four days later, and staying in the latter city for seven weeks, meeting with evangelicals amongst others. Soon after returning to London on 8 May he recorded: Armistice between Germany & Denmark & Conference in London’. This was the last entry on European political events, but he would continue to retain his interest after leaving England.

MARIA ELIZABETH FELTHAM

It is not known when Squirrell first met Maria Elizabeth Feltham, who had been born in 1841, making her slightly younger than he was. The first mentions of her in his diary were brief notes from August 1860 to September 1861 that are almost totally obscure, being semi-legible and in his own abbreviations. A couple of asterisks highlighted particularly important events in their relationship without providing any explanations. It is clear that she was meeting him in London, seemingly with a sibling, in August 1860. Something that he recorded in that month was erased subsequently; the implications are uncertain. They were together occasionally in September, October, and December that year, and in January and April (for three days) in 1861. On 18 July in the latter year he wrote to her, receiving his answer on 6 September; ‘engaged to be married’, he recorded. In September they spent several days at Harwich, and on 7 October, presumably thinking about future family responsibilities, he insured his life for £150.

85 John Squirrell, diary, entry for January 1864, Hawkins Family Papers.
86 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 1 February 1864, Hawkins Family Papers.
87 John Squirrell, diary, entry for (?)15 May 1864, Hawkins Family Papers.
88 Death Certificate of Maria Elizabeth Squirrell, 19 April 1874, Lewisham 1d, 464, General Register Office, Merseyside, England; Birth Registers, English BDM.
89 John Squirrell, diary, p. 5, Hawkins Family Papers.
90 John Squirrell, diary, entries for 20, 26 September, 7 October 1861, Hawkins Family Papers.
More details about their times together were recorded in 1862. On 25 July: ‘Maria Feltham came to London with Miss Carter. Saturday: Colosseum, M.F. & Miss Carter’.

On 30 July he recorded: ‘Wednesday. Exhibition with M.F. & Miss C’.

Four days later: ‘Chapel with M.F. & Miss Carter’. On the following day they went to the British Museum, spent the afternoon in the Zoological Gardens, and in the evening attended a prayer meeting at the Park Chapel.

The next two days’ entries were more detailed:

August 5th Tuesday…. Went to a station called “Feltham” through being shown to the wrong carriage by the Guard, walked back 6 miles with Maria to Richmond Hill. Walked to join the Keppel St people in Petersham Park, tea with friends & row on the Thames in the evening. Home by rail & bus.

Next morning August 6th Wednesday. Dear Maria went home safely, heard from her next morning.

On a Sunday in September he ‘saw Uncle Feltham’, presumably Maria’s uncle, ‘coming out of school’, and had dinner with him before they attended two religious meetings.

Maria was next mentioned in his diary in early November: ‘My Maria went to Chelmsford with Mrs Grave as millinery improver’.

On Christmas Day, ‘Maria Feltham came’. The following day, they went to the Kensington Museum, and on the evening of 27 December, a Saturday, they attended the Polytechnic.

They went to the Crystal Palace (Sarah with us) on 30 December, and two days later Maria ‘went back to Chelmsford’.

Only scattered diary entries were made in 1863, which contained a mere two mentions of Maria visiting him in London. In early October ‘Maria came to see me’ on a Saturday. ‘Monday went to [Crystal] Palace, Tuesday

---

91 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 25 July 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.
92 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 30 July 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.
93 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 3 August 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.
94 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 4 August 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.
95 John Squirrell, diary, entries for 5-6 August 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.
96 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 14 September 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.
97 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 10 November 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.
98 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 25 December 1862, Hawkins Family Papers.
100 John Squirrell, diary, entries for 30 December 1862 and ‘Thursday’ [1 January 1863], Hawkins Family Papers.
evening Pan[orama] of the Holy Land, Egypt Hall. Wednesday evening at Home. Saw her off on Thursday morning'. 101 Their reunion at Christmas time that year was briefer than planned. ‘Dear Maria came to see me on Christmas Day, was to stop to Thursday night but had a letter Tuesday eve[ning] asking [her] to come back at once, so next night she went. We enjoyed ourselves much'. 102

After spending two months in Germany from 9 March to 8 May 1864, he returned to hear ‘that dear Maria was living in London, at Brixton. She came to see me the following Sunday May 15th (in a very uncomfortable place’). 103 In the following month, ‘Dear Maria stopped with me a fortnight at Margaret St then went to Chelmsford. I could not go out with her’ because he was hoping to obtain a new job. 104 On 24 October, having obtained satisfactory employment, he recorded that he was ‘resolved if possible to get married at Christmas’. 105

On 23 December 1864 they were married. The diary entry provided no details, but in large letters recorded that the ceremony was held at Park Chapel. 106 On the following day they went to the Crystal Palace and he spent Christmas Day in the ‘office in the morning, Margaret St in the evening’. 107 Only two diary entries record something of their married life. In August 1866, the month before the birth of their first child, they had a dramatic experience:

Ab[ou]t 2.30 in morning our Bedroom door opened, an apparition with a shaded light looked through. Maria woke at the creaking of the door, covered her face & woke me. I woke instantly but only saw a light flashing in the next room. I flew up, round the bed into the room, down the stairs, yelling out at the man. He flew to the bottom. Maria after me called out for me to come back and I, not liking to leave her to run naked into the darkness after a man that I had not seen & was not likely to catch, ran back, out of the balcony, got a gentleman to watch the front, then pulling on some things I & Mr Howe went down stairs. Kitchen window was open, bars bent & lower doors opened, tool box out of Cupboard was open on the table. Jams (eaten)

101 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 10 October 1863, Hawkins Family Papers [punctuation added].
102 John Squirrell, diary, entry for ‘Christmas 1863’, Hawkins Family Papers.
103 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 9 May 1864, Hawkins Family Papers.
104 John Squirrell, diary entry for 24 (?) June 1864, Hawkins Family Papers.
105 John Squirrell, diary entry for 24 October 1864, Hawkins Family Papers.
106 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 23 December 1864, Hawkins Family Papers.
107 John Squirrell, diary, entries for 24, 25 December 1864, Hawkins Family Papers. from the top of cupboard. Muff Box\textsuperscript{108} [taken] from high shelf, meat out of the safe (gnawed), spoons & forks laid out on the table, drawers open, leftovers eaten. Upstairs we found missing 2 spoons – sugar tongs & salt spoon, box of figs taken from the sitting room was dropt in the garden, &c.
He must have thought I was after him then. Garden door key taken. Self & Mr Howe searched the Garden at once but found no signs; next morning the footsteps were visible & 3 clocks found.\textsuperscript{109}

They would have four daughters: Florence Maria, born in September 1866 at St Pancras, London; Constance Elizabeth, born in Camden Town, London, in June 1868; Edith Beatrice, born in October 1869 at Lee, in Kent, and Mary Alice, born at the latter place in January 1872.\textsuperscript{110} Only the first birth was recorded in his diary:

Morning: left Maria ill, had written for the nurse, called on the Dr as I went to the City. When I got home to my surprise the nurse had not come. I flew to Gerswest[?] St. in 12 minutes. Mrs Unwin was out & they did not know where. I soon ascertained that a younger woman had kept the letter in her pocket, & had it. Then I ran to chapel & left word there, then [went] for mother. We jumped into hansom [cab] & were soon home. 1/4 hour [later?]
the Baby was born.\textsuperscript{111}

On 19 April 1874, his wife died of blood poisoning resulting from childbirth; as the child’s birth was not registered, it must have been stillborn.\textsuperscript{112} His diary entry was brief: ‘Dear Maria died’, and was decorated with seven kiss symbols.\textsuperscript{113} To cope with his young family, he obtained assistance from a series of women:

House kept by nurse
Then Mrs ----? For a few weeks
Then Laura Feltham tried
Then Miss Skipper for abt 18 months

\textsuperscript{108}‘Box’ uncertain; handwriting is difficult to read.
\textsuperscript{109} John Squirrell, diary, entry for 22 August 1866, Hawkins Papers [punctuation adjusted or added].
\textsuperscript{110} The Squirrell Research Group website; dates recorded in John Squirrell, diary, entry for 1874, Hawkins Family Papers.
\textsuperscript{111} John Squirrell, diary, entry for 13 September 1866, Hawkins Family Papers [punctuation added].
\textsuperscript{112} The Squirrell Research Group website; Death Certificate of Maria Elizabeth Squirrell, 19 April 1874, Lewisham 1d, 464, General Register Office, Merseyside, England; W.F. Bradley to Director, Auckland Institute, 16 July 1957, John Squirrell Papers, MS 288, Library of the Auckland Institute and War Memorial Library.
\textsuperscript{113} John Squirrell, diary, entry for 19 April 1874, Hawkins Family Papers.
Afterwards Mrs Croft - & lastly Mrs Lawler.\footnote{John Squirrell, diary, n.d. (1883?), Hawkins Family Papers.}

\section*{PART TWO: NEW ZEALAND}

It is not known when Squirrell decided to settle in New Zealand, nor why he chose this particular country. But it is clear from a note about the ‘South American Fever’ of 1867 that as early as that year he had been contemplating leaving England:

In 1867 made up my mind to go to Rio de la Plata hearing that it was a suitable country for Englishmen who could keep from drinking & didn’t mind heat – began to learn Spanish & read up all books about the Country, but the partners in my house of business hearing of it, said they would make some improvement in my circumstances if I stayed, but did nothing for another year, however having a bad report from someone that I hoped to join out there I didn’t go.\footnote{John Squirrell, diary, ‘Note made on the “South American Fever” in the Summer of 1867 not made till 1883 in New Zealand’, Hawkins Family Papers.}

According to a great-nephew, shortly after his wife died he decided to create a new life for himself and his four daughters in New Zealand.\footnote{W.F. Bradley to Director, Auckland Institute, 16 July 1957, John Squirrell Papers, MS 288, Library of the Auckland Institute and War Memorial Museum; \textit{Auckland Weekly News}, 10 November 1899, p. 13.} In fact his wife had died seven years before he left England on 7 July 1881 on the steamer ‘Lusitania’, landing in Auckland on 5 September 1881 to prepare the way for his family’s arrival.\footnote{John Squirrell, diary, ‘1878/81’, Hawkins Family Papers; Tokanui Mental Hospital, Case File on John Squirrell, YCBG 5904/11, file 372, ANZ-A.} He later recorded his experiences en route:

Note made in 1883 about voyage in the \textit{Lusitania}, came 3d Class – [Wynne Ravens] Wright’s family in the 2nd Class.\footnote{Wright became a farmer in the Pukekohe district; his 1887 marriage was noted was noted in Squirrell’s diary: see Marriage Certificate of Wynne Ravens Wright, 1887/995, BDM; John Squirrell, diary, last entry for 1887, Hawkins Family Papers; \textit{Pukekohe and Waiuku Times}, 1 May 1923, p. 5.} I spent as much time in the 2nd class quarters as in the 3rd, in fact had the run of the vessel. During the latter part of the voyage by permission of the captain I spent my evenings in the 2nd class cabin – pleasant voyage, had no sickness … transferred at Melbourne to the Rotomahana….
I stopped first at St Vincent, was much struck with the beauty of the place; the mountain stood out so grand all round in the clear sky, half way up the clouds hanging, then some peaks emerging from the clouds above. I did not land however. Next place Cape Town - Sunday – landed & went to the German Church in the morning. In the afternoon tried to get to the top of Table Mountain but could not manage it as when I got high up it seemed to overhang & there was no path up. Very rough travelling, went through private gardens & over fences. Had a grand view from near the top of the mountain, sat down & ate my bread & cheese. View of ocean both sides.119

Table Bay – very bad harbour, quite dangerous work going on board the steamer out of the boats. Next place we stayed at was Australia, first port Adelaide, did not land there, went on to Melbourne, where I landed [on] both the days we stayed there. Saw all the City – Botanic gardens &c, fine place.

Then by the Rotomahana to Hobart Town, Tasmania. Very pretty place, had some good rambles on the hills & in the town, sometimes with Mr Wright, sometimes alone – then on to New Zealand – landed first at the Bluff (Campbelltown), didn’t think much of that part – snow & rain. On to Lyttleton & Christchurch, very pretty country, wandered about Christchurch alone, went inside the new Cathedral & saw the public buildings then on to Port Chalmers & Dunedin,120 again very pretty country & fine town. Went on to Wellington, saw all the public places. Went into the House of Assembly for about an hour, heard a debate – mostly Mr [William James] Spight121 talking against time, very dreary speaker. Botanic gardens very poor place, went to Museum &c.

Steamer stayed at Napier & Gisborne,122 but I didn’t land.
Then on to Auckland (Sept 5, 1881), landed.123

On 29 July 1881, his daughters left London under the care of his sister Pleasance Martha, aged 45; Florence Maria was 14, Constance Elizabeth (Bessie) was 12, Edith Beatrice was 11, and Mary Alice was 9. They arrived on 28 October,124 by which time he had obtained land on which they could settle.

119 This sentence added later.
120 Although it seems unlikely that he would have gone from Bluff to Lyttleton and then back to Port Chalmers before heading up the coast again to Wellington, this is what he recorded, twice.
121 See Observer, 11 April 1885, p. 11, 19 October 1889, p. 9, 10 August 1889, p. 8; New Zealand Herald, 25 April 1919, p. 6, 3 May 1919, p. 10; Auckland Star, 25 April 1919, p. 7.
122 Again, this sequence, twice recorded, must be incorrect.
123 John Squirrell, diary, ‘Note made in 1883 about voyage’, Hawkins Family Papers [punctuation added].
124 New Zealand Shipping Company Passenger Lists, Folder 10, 1/72/1/2-7, MS Papers 4293, Alexander Turnbull Library.
Squirrell recalled going to Thames on the evening after his arrival in Auckland and on the following day travelling upriver with a surveyor, George Henry Arthur Purchas,\textsuperscript{125} ‘to choose my land on Grant & Foster’s block (chose 150 acres)’.\textsuperscript{126} This was the Grant and Foster Settlement of Lincolnshire farmers at Shaftesbury,\textsuperscript{127} a teetotal settlement up-river from Waiorongomai.\textsuperscript{128} He was the second man (after Edward Francis Roche)\textsuperscript{129} to take up land, being granted the first land order, for 150 acres, being the middle portion of Section 36 Block 11, and also acquiring all of Section 4 Block 111 Wairere Survey District, the latter being 106 acres and 30 perches.\textsuperscript{130} His sister paid the price, £255, for this land.\textsuperscript{131} Certificates of title were granted in June 1883.\textsuperscript{132} The earliest map of the district showed his section as being a rectangular block between the river and the main road, mostly consisting of swampy ground.\textsuperscript{133} By October 1882 it was valued \textsuperscript{125} See \textit{Cyclopedia of New Zealand}, vol. 7, p. 58; \textit{New Zealand Herald}, 5 July 1933, p. 12.

\textsuperscript{126} John Squirrell, diary, ‘Note made in 1883 about voyage’, Hawkins Family Papers.

\textsuperscript{127} \textit{Thames Advertiser}, 1 June 1881, p. 3; \textit{Waikato Times}, 17 May 1881, p. 2, 13 October 1881, p. 2, 10 January 1882, p. 2.

\textsuperscript{128} See paper on special settlements in the Te Aroha district.

\textsuperscript{129} See \textit{New Zealand Herald}, 30 September 1903, p. 3.

\textsuperscript{130} Lands and Survey Department, Allotment Book no. 13, folios 139, 143; Certificates of Title, vol. 32, folios 281, 282, Land Information New Zealand, Hamilton.

\textsuperscript{131} Register of Land Orders by Messrs Grant and Foster, Te Aroha, Lands and Survey Department, LS 22/2, ANZ-W; Crown Lands Board, \textit{Auckland Weekly News}, 3 September 1881, p. 21: John Squirrell to Commissioner of Crown Lands, 25 January 1894, Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.

\textsuperscript{132} Lands and Survey Department, Certificate of Title under Land Transfer Act, Register Book, vol. 32 folio 199; Allotment Book no. 13, folios 139, 143, Land Information New Zealand, Hamilton.

\textsuperscript{133} Lands and Survey Department, Plan SO 2055C, Land Information New Zealand, Hamilton; see also plan on Certificate of Title, Register Book, vol. 32 folio 199, Land Information New Zealand, Hamilton.
Squirrell did not retain all his land for long, in September 1883 selling Section 4 Block 111 for an unknown sum.\(^{135}\)

As his land was in a state of nature, it required a considerable amount of capital to develop. In contrast to Squirrell, Roche, who had 1,000 acres, immediately constructed a house costing £1,500, purchased 200-300 head of cattle, and commenced fencing. Being ‘possessed of considerable means’, a newspapers expected that he would ‘no doubt make a very successful settler’.\(^{136}\) Squirrell, whose capital is not known but who was wealthy, in 1883 described his first months establishing himself on his land:

> After staying a month [in Te Aroha] at O’Halloran’s Hot Springs Hotel\(^{137}\) Mr [James] Lavery [a timber merchant and builder]\(^{138}\) lent me a tent and I went to live in what is now known as Roche’s gully, then non-existent, except a small portion near the river a few hundred yards [away. There were] several tents there & swampers encamping with me. After a month, or so, shifted my tent to my own land and lived alone in the valley which afterwards became my orchard, then it was full of tea tree. I began to make a garden there & cut a square out of the ti-tree & put up my tent there. The valley being set on fire afterwards I had to shift my tent in a hurry, or all my boxes &c would have been burned. [I] did not know who started the fire. The rats ran across me at night and during a very heavy rain in the middle of the night my tent fell down flat on top of me. I had to go out at once with hardly anything on & fix it up again or everything would have been soaked. Having put it right I got into bed again & took no harm. All this time I was waiting to have my house built, which was to be done in six weeks, but took four months.\(^{139}\)

Living in the gully had provided shelter from the strong local winds that would blow his brick chimney down in 1883.\(^{140}\) On the other side of the only road through the district was a small lake, ‘in which I often bathed up to my neck in water’.\(^{141}\) By mid-October a newspaper reported that he had \(^{134}\) A Return of the Freeholders of New Zealand ... October 1882 (Wellington, 1884), p. S 70.

\(^{135}\) Lands and Survey Department, Certificates of Title, vol. 32 folios 281, 282, Land Information New Zealand, Hamilton.
\(^{136}\) Thames Advertiser, 1 June 1881, p. 5.
\(^{137}\) See paper on George Stewart O’Halloran.
\(^{139}\) John Squirrell, diary, ‘Note made in 1883’, Hawkins Family Papers [punctuation added].
\(^{140}\) Te Aroha News, 4 August 1883, p. 2.
\(^{141}\) Te Aroha News, 1 May 1886, p. 7.
erected a house, and was ‘daily expecting his family from the old country’.\textsuperscript{142} He later recorded: ‘At last the kitchen was put up, and Pleasance & the children came up and lived in it (10 by 8ft) – on Xmas day 1881 we had our dinner in the House though yet unfinished, and soon after that things became more comfortable’.\textsuperscript{143} In ‘about’ March 1886 he was able to afford ‘additions to House: 2 rooms & kitchen moved, new range’.\textsuperscript{144}

\textbf{FARMER}

In October 1881, a visiting reporter considered Squirrell to be ‘one of the most indefatigable of the settlers’ because he was setting ‘to work in a thoroughly practical manner’.\textsuperscript{145} Late the following month the \textit{Waikato Times} described him and the other two pioneers as ‘men of the right stamp, prepared to work, and possessed of the capital necessary to carry out extensive improvements’.\textsuperscript{146} In February 1882, they were reported to have started ploughing. ‘All the settlers have expressed themselves highly pleased with their lot, and in every respect they are perfectly satisfied and contented’.\textsuperscript{147} Squirrell told the January 1883 meeting of the Auckland Waste Lands Board that he had completed the improvements required, and his Crown Grant was issued once he had furnished his certificate of payment of the purchase money.\textsuperscript{148}

As Squirrell had no experience as a farmer, he required a farm manager, as his 1883 ‘note’ revealed. ‘I tried farming (having Mr Hotchin\textsuperscript{149} as manager & worker), did a lot of fencing & grass sowing, gardening & road making &c &c, but could not do any good at farming, so at last began

\begin{thebibliography}{99}
\bibitem{142} \textit{Waikato Times}, 13 October 1881, p. 2.
\bibitem{143} John Squirrell, diary, ‘Note made in 1883’, Hawkins Family Papers.
\bibitem{144} John Squirrell, diary, ‘1886 about Mch’, Hawkins Family Papers.
\bibitem{145} Hamilton Correspondent, \textit{Auckland Weekly News}, 29 October 1881, p. 17.
\bibitem{146} Editorial, \textit{Waikato Times}, 26 November 1881, p. 2.
\bibitem{147} \textit{Waikato Times}, 25 February 1882, p. 2.
\bibitem{148} Auckland Land Board, Minute Book 1882-1884, p. 21, BAAZ 4091/1, ANZ-A; Crown Lands Board, \textit{Auckland Weekly News}, 27 January 1883, p. 20; Nominal Primary Index No. 6, folio 162, Land Information New Zealand, Auckland.
\bibitem{149} Probably Moses Hotchin: see \textit{Te Aroha Electoral Roll, 1891}, p. 16; \textit{Thames Advertiser}, 19 April 1882, p. 3; advertisement, \textit{Te Aroha News}, 16 June 1883, p. 3; \textit{Te Aroha Correspondent, New Zealand Herald}, 23 March 1906, p. 7.
\end{thebibliography}
to trade, worked up a business soon which kept me’. In 1884, he announced that he was selling pamphlets on the growing of tobacco as well as tobacco seed, but there was no record of his attempting to grow this plant himself. In August 1885 he bought between 500 and 600 gooseberry bushes, which he did plant. In the following January he assisted another farmer ‘harvesting & stacking’, and a couple of months later purchased 156 more fruit trees, 92 currant bushes, 50 gooseberry bushes, and 12 nut trees. In September he ‘began to dig Swamp’, and in the following month bought ten heifers. In an October 1886 letter, to a brother-in-law in England, he described the family’s life on the farm:

When we were town birds ourselves we used to enjoy immensely our trips to Suffolk which gave us such immense appetites & good fare of a somewhat different kind from town food, with which we satisfied those hungry appetites, now we enjoy on our own farm all these good things in plenty, the eggs & the milk, the butter & the bacon, the fruit & fresh vegetables, the outdoor life & the almost perpetual sunshine of this land, which seems to grow pleasanter as time goes on and my past labours are producing new beauty around our home, the frame was beautiful from the first, but now new touches are always being put to the pictures & our little white house with its verandah shews up when we are on the surrounding hills, prettily set in trees, which sown as the smallest of seeds in some cases, are now 30 feet high. Some of them, I have about 500 young trees growing up in nurseries and many large boxes of tree seeds just set, for next year, of fruit trees. I have added this year about 175 to my previous stock and have a crop of young trees of my own from last year & this years cuttings, I am always extending operations & increasing my work so that I have about 2 months work on hand which should be done at once, we rise about 5 and are all at it from morn till night but the labour is pleasant, the 2 girls have their cows to milk & calves to feed in the morning then Mary goes to School & Bess goes to mind the Store.... Bess can sit & sew to fill up the time, while I keep at home working in garden orchard farm &c. I am gradually

---

150 John Squirrell, diary, ‘Note made in 1883’, Hawkins Family Papers.
151 Te Aroha News, 27 September 1884, p. 2.
152 Te Aroha News, 8 August 1885, p. 7.
153 John Squirrell, diary, entry for January 1886, Hawkins Family Papers.
154 John Squirrell, diary, entry for March 1886, Hawkins Family Papers.
155 John Squirrell, diary, entries for September, 2 October 1886, Hawkins Family Papers.
156 W.F. Bradley to Gilbert Archey, 16 July 1957, MS 288, Library of the Auckland Institute and War Memorial Museum.
getting the little farm more into a paying system, have this day bought 10 fresh young heifers, young cattle can be bought cheap and they require no attention whatever & are always growing bigger, up to the present I have never even provided winter feed for them but I shall this year in order to be able to carry more through the winter, on previous years I have sold some as the winter came on & the feed grew short.
Pleasance looks after the fowls, we have just commenced keeping ducks, we didn’t feed them after they had grown to fair size but left them to take care of themselves so at last they almost ceased to come home at all & lived mostly by the river, but one day they sailed away down stream, they were caught about a mile & a half away by a neighbour who caged them up in his fowl house till I went and fetched them in a big box on a wheelbarrow (9 of them) since then we have fed them in the evening & now they come home to sleep - they have just begun to lay - the boat is a great source of pleasure as we cross the river on Sundays and go for walks on new paths, & see beauties which we have not seen before, we cannot spare the time for walks except on Sundays and holidays, we have fine large willow trees on the river banks to fasten the boat to, they make the banks look very pretty with their bright green branches falling into the water, there is one about every hundred yards, besides other trees of darker colours, and we are multiplying the willows by sticking cuttings in the banks, as they hold up the land & instead of the river washing away my land the sand gathers round the willows & so tends to enlarge our borders a little.
The trees I have planted this year are Apple, Pear, Plum, Nuts, about 2 dozen walnuts and about as many figs, also mulberry Quince &c. Our old Quince trees are full of blossom this year and one of the Pear trees has the most lovely blossom I have ever seen, a small tree but covered with blossom looking & smelling beautifully but no leaves out yet.
I have also set more gooseberries & Currants & have now about 800 of these, besides young ones of my own growing, of course I am growing these with the idea of selling them being on the river
I can pack them & send them down to Auckland by steamer if I ever get more than I can sell locally....
Florence & Edith are still with Mrs Farley, we expect Edith home soon for a holiday if we had enough to do for 2 more hands of profitable work I should like them at home.158

157 For the planting of these trees, see paper on the physical environment of the Te Aroha district.
158 John Squirrell to ‘Harry’ (Bradley), 2 October 1886, John Squirrell Papers, MS 288, Library of the Auckland Institute and War Memorial Museum.
(Mrs Farley, wife of Thomas, an Anglican clergyman then based in Auckland but later transferred to the South Island before becoming a farmer in Australia, had spent several weeks taking the waters at Te Aroha in May that year with her husband along with other clergy and their wives. Clearly Squirrell had met her on some such visit and had decided that she could provide his daughters with spiritual guidance, for Edith had been living with her as an assistant during 1885 and 1886, returning home in December of the latter year.)

In November 1886 he sought advice through newspapers about walnut trees, which he intended to plant more should they be profitable. Presumably in response to advice, in the following July he planted another two-dozen walnut trees on the hillside. More were planted in November. His success as a farmer may be indicated by his farm not being included in mid-1887 in a visiting journalist’s list of the good ones. In February 1888 he employed a man to dig a drain. That month he proudly recorded ‘Largest apple 17 1/2oz (a Bismark)’, and in the following month he sold ‘over 1000lbs Coxes Apples’. In September a 12-acres paddock was ploughed and re-sown, another was ploughed, and two rows of trees were planted.

By December that year his sister had settled in Auckland and he was being assisted by three of his daughters, Florence, Bessie, and Mary. ‘I wrote some time ago to Edith to come home but she thought I could not afford to keep any more, so wouldn’t come, but I think she will come soon as I should like to have her at home again, there is plenty of out door work for them to do with the market gardening & fruit growing’. On the farm ‘we have had a rough spring this year, much wind and some very late frosts which nipped off about half my young garden crops, this country is getting good out of its neighbour’s misfortunes, the drought in Australia is making all our produce fetch a high price’. He had planted more fruit trees during the winter and was ‘breaking up ground now for about 100 more’ because the demand for fruit was ‘greater than the 161 John Squirrell, diary, entries for 1885, January 1886, December 1886, Hawkins Family Papers.

---

163 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 2 July 1887, Hawkins Family Papers.

164 John Squirrell, diary, entry for November 1887, Hawkins Family Papers.

166 John Squirrell, diary, entry for February 1888, Hawkins Family Papers.

167 John Squirrell, diary, entries for February and March 1888, Hawkins Family Papers.

168 John Squirrell, diary, entry for September 1888, Hawkins Family Papers.
supply here, our district being only about 10 years old’. The ‘extra late frost’ had killed ‘all my potatoes down to the ground and most other things’, which meant he had ‘to resow the ground again and it wont make so very much difference’. They were ‘consuming a great many apples now as we have plenty’. Mary was ‘getting clever in Dairy farming can tell a good calf from a bad one so we get rid of those who do not promise well, and also of all the hes’, meaning the bobby calves, and only keep those who will grow up into good cows, so that our Stock is always improving, the kickers and poor milkers are all gone, we have a white cow who pinned the girls in a corner with her horns, and a black cow who knocked me down and danced on me, to say nothing of one who let the senses out of me for a short time by making a hole in my head, but this is all done with and all our cows are home raised pets - they will come up to us and let us put our arms round their necks and they give more milk than the duffers we got at first.

Our fowls get into the orchards and are learning to pick out the nicest eating apple trees - our two pigs on several occasions also managed to burrow underneath the sty and take a walk without leave among the fruit trees, I was going to bed one night when I heard some grunts outside and had to get Mary to bring a bucket of milk to get them back home again.169

In July 1889 he purchased 36 cherry trees, 25 of both plum and pear trees, and 74 apple trees.170 But in December he recorded: ‘Bad Storm fruit destroyed’.171 In the following July he had his first harvest of mulberries.172 In 1892, because of damage to his fruit trees, he sought advice through an Auckland newspaper about ridding his land of hares:

I am setting out fruit trees, and every tree has the bark destroyed next day up to about a foot and a half from the ground.... Between the codlin moth who spoils the fruit, the hares who eat the trees, and the Government Inspector who will soon devour the grower, the orchardist seems likely to have a lively time of it.173

169 John Squirrell to ‘Harry’ (Bradley), 24 December 1888, John Squirrell Papers, MS 288, Library of the Auckland Institute and War Memorial Museum.

170 John Squirrell, diary, entries for 20, 29 July 1889, Hawkins Family Papers.

171 John Squirrell, diary, entry for December 1889, Hawkins Family Papers.

172 John Squirrell, diary, entry for July 1890, Hawkins Family Papers.

Some unwelcome plants soon arrived: six years later, the council instructed him to remove sweet briar.\(^{174}\)

In January 1896 the Bank of New Zealand had a lien over his farm, then comprising 43 acres three roods 10 perches in the middle part of Section 36 Block 11,\(^ {175}\) as security for a promissory note taken out in December. This land and its improvements, which included his house and store and an orchard, was valued by his bank at £200; Squirrell valued the buildings at £200 and the land at £250, while the bank's valuation was £150 and £50 respectively. As he had insured the house and store for £150 and the stock and furniture for £235, this security meant the bank provided further credit of £500.\(^ {176}\) By 1905 the rateable value on his farm had risen to £430.\(^ {177}\) In the following year, when his daughter Edith married a farmer, the newly married couple lived in his house because the bridegroom, John Hawkins, had made ‘a partnership arrangement’ with Squirrell, presumably to operate the farm for him.\(^ {178}\)

In the early twentieth century, he expanded his dairy herd, taking his milk to the Manawaru Creamery.\(^ {179}\) The last report about his farm was published in 1914, when his horse took fright while carting boxes of fruit to Te Aroha; he ‘soon found himself lying in a drain at the bottom of the cutting with the cart upside down on top of him. As he fell into the soft drain he received no harm, and managed to crawl out’.\(^ {180}\)

STOREKEEPER

In September 1882, the firm of T.W. Carr and Son\(^ {181}\) commenced erecting a large general store in ‘the lower part’ of Shaftesbury.\(^ {182}\) A man named Knight soon took it over until Squirrell formed a partnership with \(^{174}\) Piako County Council, Waikato Argus, 22 October 1898, p. 3.

\(^{175}\) Nominal Primary Index No. 6, folio 162, Land Information New Zealand, Auckland.

\(^{176}\) Bank of New Zealand, Auckland Register of Securities 1887-1896, no. 186, Bank of New Zealand Archives, Wellington.

\(^{177}\) Piako County Council, Rate Book 1905-1906: Te Aroha Riding [no pagination], Matamata-Piako District Council Archives, Te Aroha.

\(^{178}\) Waikato Times, 20 June 1906, p. 2.

\(^{179}\) Te Aroha News, 26 January 1911, p. 2.

\(^{180}\) Shaftesbury Correspondent, Te Aroha News, 6 April 1914, p. 2.

\(^{181}\) See paper on Thomas William Carr.

him on 3 February 1883, which lasted until June, when it became Squirrell’s sole property. As noted, he wrote in that year that he had turned to ‘trade’ because he was not succeeding as a farmer. ‘I ultimately took the Shaftesbury Store, but being unable to get the Crown Grant for my land for many months after applying for it, had immense difficulties for some time, but doubled the business in about 3 months’. In May 1884 he became the local postmaster as well. Three years later he had some difficulty in retaining this position, noting: ‘Fight for Post Office’. Also in 1884 he advertised that the store, in Shaftesbury Avenue, would be open from nine o’clock in the morning until six o’clock in the evening six days a week and closing on Saturday night at seven o’clock. He sold a wide range of products, for example in 1885 offering 880 kauri posts for sale.

Particularly because of the decline in the local population, storekeeping alone could not provide him with a living. Shaftesbury had been expected to contain 225 settlers, comprising both families possessing capital, who were granted good-sized farms, and farm labourers, on small sections, who would replicate the English village structure by working for the wealthier farmers. By late 1882, residents, mostly farm labourers, were leaving, and by 1884 three out of four houses had been abandoned. By December 1885, of the 37 farm labourers and their families who had arrived in 1882, all but ten had been ‘starved out’. In October 1885, Squirrell explained the consequences of this decline to Sir George Grey:

When the work dropped, for a time they were kept hanging on in hopes of more work, living then (unfortunately for me) on goods

---

183 Te Aroha Warden’s Court, Minute Book 1885-1886, folio 5, notes by Harry Kenrick, 10 November 1885, BBAV 11532/1a, ANZ-A.
184 John Squirrell, diary, ‘Note made in 1883’, Hawkins Family Papers.
185 New Zealand Gazette, 8 May 1884, p. 782.
186 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 1887, Hawkins Family Papers.
188 Advertisement, Te Aroha News, 4 July 1885, p. 7.
189 Te Aroha Mail, 3 June 1882, p. 2; Auckland Weekly News, 19 August 1882, p. 9.
191 Waikato Times, 8 September 1885, p. 2; Thames Advertiser, 11 December 1885, p. 3.
from my store, which they have never paid for & landing themselves in £700 or £800 of debt to me, till I gradually grew stern & had to refuse further credit, they having by that time swallowed up 110 out of my 150 acres which I had to sell to pay for their goods.\textsuperscript{192}

In October 1886, he told his brother-in-law that during the day his daughter Bess was minding the store for him while he worked on his farm. He had ‘almost abandoned’ it to her, as the business is less than ever, the best business I have done lately is buying up my opponents stock when they smash up & go away, but the strange thing is that some new adventurer always starts up to take their places, one year is about the outside duration of these opponents, so I waste but little time over the business now but go every afternoon for an hour or so, and on Saturdays from 12 till 8, also at any other time that I am wanted, Bess can sit & sew to fill up the time.

He intended to sell the produce of his fruit trees and gooseberry and currant bushes in Auckland ‘if I ever get more than I can sell locally, one reason why I hang on to the Store so is that I can sell my own produce there, besides getting every thing I want for farm or home at wholesale prices, which makes my expenses less than other peoples’.\textsuperscript{193}

In February 1887 he acquired a new cart and ‘commenced fetching Goods from’ a warehouse, presumably in Te Aroha.\textsuperscript{194} In May he was the main sufferer from a big gale. ‘A quantity of goods placed in a large two-storey building adjoining his store, were much broken and injured by the rain, etc, through the building being overturned and generally wrecked’. This building belonged to another man, and ‘fortunately Mr Squirrell’s general store escaped, and the mishap will not in any way affect the carrying on of his business’.\textsuperscript{195} Later that month, he ‘removed his business back to the site first occupied by him when commencing business at \textsuperscript{193} John Squirrell to ‘Harry’ (Bradley), 2 October 1886, John Squirrell Papers, MS 288, Library of the Auckland Institute and War Memorial Museum.

\textsuperscript{194} John Squirrell, diary, entries for 26 February 1887 and ‘Feb’, Hawkins Family Papers.
\textsuperscript{195} Te Aroha News, 14 May 1887, p. 2.
Shaftesbury, which adjoins his dwelling house’. In addition to running his ‘commodious Store’ he had become an agent for the New Zealand Insurance Company and the Frozen Meat and Storage Company. In January 1888 he commenced selling vegetables at Te Aroha.

In December 1888, in describing his storekeeping difficulties, he explaining that, in addition to selling his own apples he had also bought a neighbours crop and he delivers me about 4 to 500lbs weekly. I expect he will continue doing that for about 4 months making 7 to 8000lbs which I must sell besides my own. I go out with the cart twice a week and if I find that is not enough shall have to go every other day. I am away about 12 hours, on a wet day I have to emulate Mark Tapley as I get pretty wet and have hard work to keep the contents of my cart dry. My return cargo includes 3 to 4 doz loaves of bread and other things which would spoil if wet, yet I have to keep weighing & selling fruit &c in the rain but on the whole my work is tolerably pleasant. I find my Stock (Store) a great burden to me and I have to keep working off portions at the other townships often forcing a sale by selling at a loss but I am gradually getting money in, - as I have bought a great deal of stuff at bankrupts sales (2 years ago) I make on the average cost price all round on my sales abroad, and of course I have a small home business in groceries and necessaries which about pays for the business expenses, so I am liquidating the business without loss and perhaps with a small profit.

As his shop would have benefited from constructing a bridge at Shaftesbury in 1900, he may have been one of the neighbouring settlers who subscribed towards its erection. Until then, Thompson’s Track, which crossed the range from the Bay of Plenty, ended abruptly at the river, where in good weather a punt was used. ‘The store and post office being on one side of the river, and the creamery and school being on the other, added to the awkwardness of the position’.

---

196 Te Aroha News, 28 May 1887, p. 2; see also John Squirrell, diary, entry for May 1887, Hawkins Family Papers.
197 Te Aroha News, 4 June 1887, p. 3.
198 John Squirrell, diary, entry for January 1888, Hawkins Family Papers.
199 A character in Charles Dickens’ novel Martin Chuzzlewit.
200 John Squirrell to ‘Harry’ (Bradley), 24 December 1888, John Squirrell Papers, MS 288, Library of the Auckland Institute and War Memorial Museum.
201 Te Aroha Correspondent, New Zealand Herald, 6 August 1900, p. 7.
used as a polling place in 1902.\(^{202}\) When Squirrell finally sold or closed his store in not known; after conducting it for over 30 years, he had been retired as storekeeper and postmaster ‘for some time’ before his death in 1924.\(^{203}\)

One of the main problems facing Squirrell, like all village storekeepers in the depressed years of the 1880s in particular, was to enforce payment of goods sold on credit. In 1883 he also tried to obtain monies owing to the original owners of the store, Carr and Son, having purchased the book debts of their bankrupt estate. In June 1883, he sued Joseph Snasdell for £17 8s 6d, which included £11 17s 7d ‘on account of Carr’s estate, which plaintiff had authority to collect’; Snasdell was ordered to pay £16 11s 10d.\(^{204}\) In February 1885, he successfully sued Snasdell for £11 5s 5d.\(^{205}\) On 23 October, William McLeod was ordered to pay £13 6s 1d, a debt he admitted owing; his failure to do so meant a judgment summons was taken out against him seven days later.\(^{206}\) The legal fees had increased the debt to £14 6s by the time a distress warrant was served on 22 November, but McLeod paid only £2 4s.\(^{207}\) In November Squirrell sued Moses Neal, a miner,\(^{208}\) for £97 19s 9d, ‘of which £10 1s 9d was a sum due to Carr’s estate, purchased by plaintiff’; judgment was given for £87 12s 3d.\(^{209}\) Unable to pay, Neal filed as a bankrupt in December.\(^{210}\) Payment for six other small debts were sought through the magistrate’s court in November and December,\(^{211}\) and \(^{202}\) Thames Star, 15 November 1902, p. 3.

\(^{203}\) Te Aroha News, 8 August 1924, p. 4.

\(^{204}\) Te Aroha Magistrate’s Court, Civil Record Book 1881-1884, 58/1883, BCDG 11221/1a, ANZ-A; Magistrate’s Court, Te Aroha News, 9 June 1883, p. 3, 23 June 1883, p. 2.

\(^{205}\) Te Aroha Magistrate’s Court, Civil Record Book 1884-1889, 8/1885, BCDG 11221/1b, ANZ-A.

\(^{206}\) Te Aroha Magistrate’s Court, Civil Record Book 1881-1884, 152/1883, Judgment Summons issued 30 October 1883, BCDG 11221/1a, ANZ-A; Magistrate’s Court, Te Aroha News, 27 October 1883, p. 2.

\(^{207}\) Te Aroha Magistrate’s Court, Home Warrant Book 1883-1928, 17/1883, BBAV 11498/1a, ANZ-A.

\(^{208}\) See Te Aroha News, 18 October 1884, p. 7; letter from H.H. Adams, Waikato Times, 1 November 1884, p. 3.

\(^{209}\) Te Aroha Magistrate’s Court, Civil Record Book 1881-1884, 171/1883, BCDG 11221/1a, ANZ-A; Magistrate’s Court, Te Aroha News, 24 November 1883, p. 2.

\(^{210}\) Thames Advertiser, 21 December 1883, p. 2.

\(^{211}\) Te Aroha Magistrate’s Court, Civil Record Book 1881-1884, 154-156, 158, 184, 186/1883, BCDG 11221/1a, ANZ-A.
presumably paid, but in two other cases it proved more difficult to enforce payment. George Turrell, a Maori, was ordered to pay £30 5s, did not, and after a judgment summons was taken out against him was ordered to pay £33 19s and the interpreter’s fee of £1 1s by 8 February 1884 or be imprisoned for one month.212 Despite a warrant of commitment being taken out against him in September, Turrell was not imprisoned; in 1902 Squirrell took out another judgment summons against him to enforce payment of £35 6s.213 The same sequence happened with another Maori, Nepi, ordered to pay £3 and threatened with two weeks’ imprisonment if he did not; despite a warrant of commitment being taken out, he was not imprisoned.214 In 1902 Nepi was sued once more for the original amount plus court costs.215 In 1884 he also sued for £13 16s 1d and £35.216

As a result of these difficulties, in December 1884 Squirrell published an advertisement in the Te Aroha News:

In consequence of the great difficulty experienced in getting the Cash due for Goods NO FURTHER CREDIT can be given. All Debtors are requested to make friendly arrangements at once with respect to the payment of back debts. GREAT REDUCTIONS will be made in Prices, and everything SOLD for CASH ONLY.217

It continued to be his policy in later years to sell only for cash.218 In 1884, when he sued for £28, the value of goods sent to be auctioned, the

212 Te Aroha Magistrate’s Court, Civil Record Book 1881-1884, 157/1883, Judgment Summons issued on 8 January 1884, BCDG 11221/1a, ANZ-A.
213 Te Aroha Magistrate’s Court, Home Warrant Book 1883-1928, 37/1884, BBAV 11498/1a; Civil Record Book 1896-1907, Judgment Summons issued on 26 August 1902, BCDG 11221/2a, ANZ-A; New Zealand Police Gazettes, 1884, 1885.
214 Te Aroha Magistrate’s Court, Civil Record Book 1881-1884, 153/1883, Judgment Summons issued on 8 January 1884, BCD, 11221/1a; Home Warrant Book 1883-1928, 38/1884, BBAV 11498/1a, ANZ-A; New Zealand Police Gazettes, 1884, 1885.
215 Te Aroha Magistrate’s Court, Civil Record Book 1896-1907, Judgment Summons issued 29 July 1902, BCDG 11221/2a, ANZ-A.
216 Te Aroha Magistrate’s Court, Civil Record Book 1881-1884, Plaint 183 and Judgment Summons issued on 4 March 1884, BCDG 11221/1a; Home Warrant Book 1883-1928, 37/1884, BBAV 11498/1a, ANZ-A.
218 Te Aroha News, 28 May 1887, p. 2.
auctioneer paid £5 8s into court, being the value of goods sold three weeks previously; as Squirrell had not received regular statements of account, he had sued for the full amount. The decision was that £23 10s be paid, unless the goods were returned within 24 hours, in which case the penalty would be 1s. As nothing further was reported, the goods must have been returned. That Squirrell did not keep to his policy of never allowing credit was indicated in 1895, when a local bankrupt’s largest debt, of £12, was to him.

In October 1886, Squirrell wrote that ‘one man who has owed me £25 for 3 years says he has come in for £7000 in England so I hope to get my money, with regard to some others by means of the farm I can sometimes get something paid off the debts by taking it out in work so that store helps the farm & the farm the store’. Two years later, Squirrell gave evidence when Julia Esther Taylor of Shaftesbury sought a protection order against her husband, John, for ‘having habitually failed to provide for herself and children, without such failure having been caused by sickness or any other just cause’. Squirrell deposed that he had seen the defendant drinking in a Waiorongomai hotel:

Knowing he had some contract work, I asked him how it was he was not at it. He said he did not go on with the contract work as it was not good enough. He said, however, he could have gone on with some other work, but did not say why he did not do so. Before this time he was at work at Messrs Thompson and Herries’ place [Ernest Claud Meysey-Thompson and the future Sir William Herries farmed together at Wairakau], and made some excuse for leaving. At this time I offered him work at a price he fixed himself: One half was to go against his store account, and one half to be paid in cash. He took the work and went on with it for about a fortnight, and then went away in the middle of it. By the amount of work he did it was clear he would earn £6 per

---

219 Te Aroha Correspondent, Waikato Times, 30 April 1885, p. 3.

221 John Squirrell to ‘Harry’ (Bradley), 2 October 1886, John Squirrell Papers, MS 288, Library of the Auckland Institute and War Memorial Museum.

223 See Herries.
month, receiving at least £3 per month in cash, which, together with Mrs Taylor’s earnings, would be amply sufficient to keep them.\textsuperscript{224}

Because this arrangement was a private one between creditor and debtor, Squirrell had never taken Taylor to court. Three and a half months later, he mentioned in a letter that he had ‘a man now working for me he is one of my largest debtors and I keep half his wages for the back debts and he lives on the rest and has something to spare but as he spends his money with me for the necessaries of life he doesn’t cost me much in actual money’.\textsuperscript{225} The name of this man was not given, but in September 1889, when Julia Taylor sought payment of maintenance, her husband told the magistrate that ‘I have done a good deal of work for Mr Squirrell, storekeeper, but half my earnings are deducted towards paying the back debts incurred before my wife got separation’.\textsuperscript{226} This arrangement whereby a debt was paid off by doing work may have been used on other occasions.

Squirrell was sued only twice. In 1883, Robert Mackie, a Te Aroha butcher,\textsuperscript{227} successfully sued him for £20 6s 1d, presumably for meat supplied.\textsuperscript{228} Almost two years later, he was sued for £1 12s 8d, for newspapers supplied, which he denied having ordered. ‘After some very voluminous evidence had been gone into’, a lawyer ‘produced a letter written by defendant, which brought the case to a speedy conclusion, as defendant said he had quite forgotten ever having written such a letter, but could not dispute the claim having seen it’.\textsuperscript{229}

\textbf{INVOLVEMENT IN THE COMMUNITY}

Squirrell was a leading member of the small Shaftesbury community. In January 1884, he was a member of the school committee and was re-

\begin{flushright}
\textsuperscript{224} Magistrate’s Court, \textit{Te Aroha News}, 8 September 1888, p. 2.
\textsuperscript{225} John Squirrell to ‘Harry’ (Bradley), 24 December 1888, John Squirrell Papers, MS 288, Library of the Auckland Institute and War Memorial Museum.
\textsuperscript{226} Magistrate’s Court, \textit{Te Aroha News}, 4 September 1889, p. 2.
\textsuperscript{227} See paper on Robert and Elizabeth Mackie.
\textsuperscript{228} Te Aroha Magistrate’s Court, Civil Record Book 1881-1884, 185/1883, BCDG 11221/1a, ANZ-A.
\textsuperscript{229} Te Aroha Warden’s Court, Plaint Book 1880-1898, folio 5, BBAV 11547/1a, ANZ-A; Magistrate’s Court, \textit{Te Aroha News}, 14 November 1885, p. 2.
\end{flushright}
elected until at least 1889;\textsuperscript{230} the loss of the local newspaper for most of the 1890s makes it impossible to know when he ceased to be a member. In mid-1895 an Auckland newspaper refused to publish his letter ‘detailing a series of irregularities that he alleges took place’ at Te Aroha ‘in connection with the school committee election’ because the matter was ‘long past, and at the time the Board of Education declined to interfere’.\textsuperscript{231} (There was no record in the board’s minutes of its having considered his complaint.)\textsuperscript{232} In the following year he was elected as secretary of the school committee at Gordon, where he had settled.\textsuperscript{233} In 1906 he would chair the meeting of the householders of nearby Aratiatia held to elect their school committee.\textsuperscript{234}

In 1884, he was one of three residents who asked the council if they could improve the roadway at the settlement because it had not done this work, as requested.\textsuperscript{235} In July 1886 he complained to it about the bad state of the roads.\textsuperscript{236} An indication of his status was that he chaired a meeting of residents who had been ‘starved out’ but did not wish to lose their three acres. After the meeting, he wrote a letter to Sir George Grey on the lines desired by the meeting,\textsuperscript{237} adding ‘a few remarks’ in a covering letter:

\begin{quote}
Personally I have nothing to complain of having been a purchaser of 150 acres for which I paid at once, thereby avoiding any complications, I am simply acting in this matter as a friend to the working men here, who by the bankruptcy of Mr Grant [who had founded the settlement] have fallen into fresh hands & cannot get what they are entitled to.

If the pressure of your many engagements does not leave you time to peruse this, please throw it aside, but kindly attend to the workmen’s petition.

I was a settler here before these people came and as farmer, storekeeper, & postmaster, have had intimate relations with all the settlers and I can certify that the men whose names are attached to the enclosed have been here the 3 years required, and have suffered much hardship in trying to remain. They state that \end{quote}

\textsuperscript{231} New Zealand Herald, 17 June 1895, p. 3.

\textsuperscript{232} Auckland Education Board, Minutes of Proceedings 1892-1895, YCAF 5491/8a, ANZ-A.

\textsuperscript{233} New Zealand Herald, 1 May 1896, p. 3.

\textsuperscript{234} New Zealand Herald, 3 July 1906, p. 7.

\textsuperscript{235} Te Aroha News, 18 October 1884, p. 2.

\textsuperscript{236} Piako County Council, Waikato Times, 6 July 1886, p. 2.

\textsuperscript{237} Te Aroha News, 5 December 1885, p. 2.
an agreement was made with them in England to find them work during the 3 years, work was found for a time and then suddenly withdrawn leaving these 36 families stranded, in a place which now finds work for about 4 men out of these settlers.

He then described how the men had to seek work elsewhere whilst their wives and families remained on their sections, often having to beg for food from their neighbours when their husbands could not send money. The founders of the settlement had promised to give them the land if they remained on it for three years, but now Edward Wingfield Hanmer, the founders’ agent, appeared to be trying to take their land off them, in a manner he described in detail. He concluded by offering to provide additional information. Grey responded by thanking him ‘for your extremely clear and intelligent letter. It was a great assistance to me’, and he promised to assist. In a letter to the settlers, Grey referred to ‘an exceedingly clear and full letter from Mr Squirrell’. Perhaps because of Squirrell’s intervention and Grey’s subsequent actions they did not lose their land; but being unable to survive financially, most did leave.

In other ways Squirrell supported the original aims of the community, in 1885 helping to run meetings for the Band of Hope, a children’s temperance organization. He chaired a children’s entertainment in September, and, after the usual songs and recitations, the second half of the programme was ‘an original play entitled “Blue Beard,” composed by Mr Squirrell, who also took the leading part in it, and caused much amusement’.

In 1903 he became registrar of dogs for the Te Aroha Riding of the Piako County Council; he was last appointed to this position in 1907.

238 See Te Aroha Correspondent, Thames Advertiser, 10 September 1881, p. 3; Waikato Times, 9 October 1884, p. 2; Te Aroha News, 18 April 1885, p. 7.
240 Te Aroha News, 5 December 1885, p. 2.
242 Te Aroha News, 22 August 1885, p. 2.
243 Te Aroha News, 10 October 1885, p. 2.
244 County Council to John Squirrell, 24 February 1903, Piako County Council, Letterbook 1902-1903, p. 248, Matamata-Piako District Council Archives, Te Aroha; Te Aroha
JAMES MUNRO TEMPTS HIM TO BECOME A MINER

In May 1888, as Squirrell later recounted, when going round on my business journeys a man I knew asked me if I would put money into a good thing if I knew of one, I said I would if I was sure it was a good thing, he then showed me a piece of heavy mineral which was evidently worth something by its weight and appearance, he told me that his son had discovered a good reef at the Tui Creek, and that this specimen was out of it, but that they had not the money necessary to take it up. I promised to go and see it.245

James Munro was the man who made this offer; his son was Donald, then aged either 27 or 24 (his birth had not been registered).246 James was a blacksmith, first at Thames in the early goldrush days and then at Waitekauri and Waiorongomai.247 During the mid-1880s his attempts to become a contractor were unsuccessful.248 As an indication of the state of his finances, in 1889 he was sued by a storekeeper for £5 1s 10d-worth of goods supplied; he had been permitted to obtain these on credit until the debt had reached £3 18s.249

During the 1870s Munro had been a shareholder in Thames mining claims that were soon abandoned because of lack of success.250 He was

---

246 Death Certificate of Mary Ann Munro, 21 July 1889, 1889/3368, BDM.
247 Birth Certificate of Mary Ann Munro, 13 August 1870, 1870/186, BDM; New Zealand Gazette, 19 October 1876, p. 715; Waikato Electoral Roll, 1884, p. 15.
249 Magistrate’s Court, Te Aroha News, 15 June 1889, p. 7.
250 Thames Warden’s Court, Register of Claims 1872-1874, nos. 1, 39, 157, 171, BACL 14397/8a; Register of Claims 1875-1876, folios 4, 119, 127, BACL 14397/9a; Register of Grahamstown Claims 1876-1878, nos. 520, 529, BACL 14397/11a, ANZ-A.
granted two claims at Waitekauri in 1876, but did no work on either. In 1883, along with his son Donald and others, he was a partner in three claims near Te Aroha, which they soon abandoned. His first involvement with Waiorongomai mining was to take up a claim with another man near the settlement in May 1883; they abandoned it six months later. In December that year, at the banquet celebrating the first cleaning up at the new battery, Munro responded to the toast to ‘mining interests’ with ‘a speech which for good feeling and an evident desire for the good of the district would be difficult to equal’. In 1885 he was out-bid in an attempt to buy the Vulcan. For one year from April 1886 he owned the Young Caledonian with another miner, Peter Buchan; although when asking the council to connect it to the tramway he claimed it was payable, they failed to find good ore. Also in 1886, his application to be manager of the tramway was declined, as was his request in January 1888 on behalf of the Te Aroha Prospecting Association for financial assistance to prospect at Waiorongomai. A vocal opponent of the monopoly enjoyed by the Battery Company, he was a prominent champion of Waiorongomai’s interests.

---

251 Thames Warden’s Court, Report Book of Mining Inspector, no. 2, 1876-1878, folios 64, 90, BACL 14451/1a, ANZ-A.
252 Te Aroha Warden’s Court, Register of Te Aroha Claims 1880-1888, folios 285, 304, 305, BBAV 11567/1a, ANZ-A.
253 Te Aroha Warden’s Court, Register of Te Aroha Claims 1880-1888, folio 283, BBAV 11567/1a, ANZ-A.
254 Te Aroha News, 8 December 1883, p. 3.
255 Te Aroha News, 19 September 1885, p. 2.
256 For his career at Waiorongomai, see Te Aroha Warden’s Court, Register of Te Aroha Claims 1880-1888, folios 144, 317, BBAV 11567/1a, ANZ-A; Te Aroha News, 31 October 1885, p. 2, Piako County Council, 7 August 1886, p. 2. Was he the Peter Buchan referred to in Auckland Weekly News, 16 October 1886, p. 1?
257 Te Aroha Warden’s Court, Register of Te Aroha Claims 1880-1880, folio 144, BBAV 11567/1a; Register of Applications 1883-1900, 47/1886, BBAV 11505/1a, ANZ-A; Thames School of Mines, Assay Book 1886-1887, sample from Young Caledonian tested for Munro on unrecorded date, School of Mines Archives, Thames; Piako County Council, Waikato Times, 5 August 1886, p. 2.
259 For example, Te Aroha News, 16 August 1884, p. 2, 7 February 1885, p. 7.
He also attempted to become a farmer by becoming a member of the Gordon Special Settlement Association, mainly comprising Waiorongomai residents, of which he was treasurer in 1885 and 1886 and chairman in 1887 and 1888.261

His son Donald was a plumber, living at Waiorongomai.262 In 1883 he was one of seven owners of three claims near Te Aroha, soon abandoned.263 In the following year, an advertisement warned that his 30 shares in the Colonist Company would be forfeited if the latest call remained unpaid.264 In 1886, he was granted 89 acres at the Gordon Special Settlement,265 but there was no record of his having farmed there. That he was sued in February 1888 to enforce payment of £2 15s 6d and the following year to obtain £4 2s 2d266 suggests either that he had very little money or that he was reluctant to part with what he had, neither supposition being encouraging for his mining with Squirrell.

MINING AT TUI

In August 1888, when Squirrell wrote a letter to his English relations about his experiences as a miner, he described his first visit to where Munro’s specimen had been found:

A few days afterwards 4 of us made a journey to the Tui Creek about 3 miles north of Te Aroha, on our way there we decided that as it was desirable not to let any one know what we were about lest they should lay claim to it sooner than ourselves, we agreed that I as a stranger should go to visit the mines up the hill, and 262 Waikato Electoral Roll, 1884, p. 15; Tauranga Electoral Roll, 1887, p. 18.

263 Te Aroha Warden’s Court, Register of Te Aroha Claims 1880-1888, folios 285, 304, 305, BBAV 11567/1a, ANZ-A.

264 Te Aroha News, 1 August 1885, p. 7.

265 Waikato Times, 7 September 1886, p. 2.

266 Te Aroha Magistrate’s Court, Civil Record Book 1884-1889, 21/1888, BCDG 11221/1b; Civil Record Book 1889-1896, 115/1889, BCDG 11221/1c, ANZ-A.
that my friends should show me about, no one would be likely then to suspect anything, or follow us all day, and on returning we arranged to slip aside from the track and go to see the newly discovered reef.

So we spent the morning climbing up the hill, which we found was pretty stiff work as the mud was considerable in places, and the ascent steep, after about an hour & a half of toiling relieved by an occasional rest on a log we arrived at the mines, this last hour and a half was in the bush we having had a previous hours climb up the hill side before entering the range.

I cannot attempt to describe the Bush scenery, it would need a man well acquainted with the names of the numerous forest trees and also with the faculty of portraying the beauty of a New Zealand forest, varied by its occasional glimpses through openings, of wide stretches of the country lying outstretched below like a dark green map with the shining beads of river here & there, and in one place a large swamp lake glistening in the sun in the background where the distant ranges which in this country seem always to bound every horizon.

When well up the hill we came to the mines, we inspected the “Ruakaka” and the “Champion” claims, both since turned into Companies, there were cuttings into the surface of the hill side, and a shanty containing a forge to sharpen tools in & other blacksmiths’ work. In one place we came to a tunnel in which 2 men were working by the light of a candle, one held the drill in the roof of the tunnel while the other struck it with the hammer, the tunnel was supported by timber and water dripped in here & there running out along the floor, outside we could see better what kind of ore they were getting, the quartz was divided into two heaps, on the one side was the galena ore a mixture of silver & lead on the other another kind of ore the value of which we had to take for granted being new chums at that kind of the thing, several of the miners said they didn't understand the kind of stuff they were getting out, but they were told it was all right, before coming back we rested in their whare being invited to partake of tea &c, we then returned down the hill and when more than half way down were taken aside by our guide and in a short time were inspecting the newly discovered reefs, after chipping off pieces here & there I came to the conclusion that the stone was the same as in the other mines, and agreed to take up the matter.

I may say at once that this involved the payment of £40 into court for first years rent & Survey expenses.

The site of these reefs (there appeared to be 2 of them) was on the sides of a gully the creek running down between them, when I was quite satisfied, we returned down the hill, and the next day the pegs were driven in to mark the boundaries that we claimed, we then gave notice at the court for 30 acres of ground as a licensed holding christening it by the title of “Silver Queen.”

On 14 May, Squirrell had first gone ‘to see Reef & other mines’, and two days later applied for the Silver Queen Licensed Holding. On 19 May, he along with and Donald Munro advertised that they had applied for 30 acres, to be known as the Silver Queen Gold and Silver Mining Company, at Tui Creek, about half a mile from Ruakaka Township on the north-east, and about half a mile north west from [Edward] Cameron’s camp. They stated they would invest £2,000, a large sum they did not possess.

Squirrell described his amateurish attempt to be a miner to his family in England:

We then had to wait 2 months while the survey was being made and also to give others an opportunity of opposing our claims in the event of their having pegged it out before us, when the day came there was no opposition and it was granted to us. Meanwhile we paid a visit to it to try to find the survey lines, but could do no work as it was not yet ours. The surveyor is supposed to cut a clear track all round the 30 acres, we found one such line, and some signs of another partly marked but not cut, and up to the present we have been content with that having had no time to hunt up the other 2 lines, 30 acres of ground taken level includes about 1/2 as much again owing to steepness of the ground, so it will be a long time before we go all over it, as far as I can see by the plan and a partial inspection it appears to be something like this

---

267 Squirrell, ‘Mining at Tui Creek’, p. 1 of typescript.
269 See paper on his life.
270 Advertisement, Te Aroha News, 19 May 1888, p. 7.
the two “c’s” are the creeks rushing down hill. On one side it contains 4 creeks but each two of them combine into one so that while 4 creeks run into the property above, only 2 run out of it below, these creeks are full of large & small stones and the vegetation on both sides make them somewhat difficult to follow. There are plenty of Tui birds who sing always the same peculiar little song, the rushing water makes such a noise that you cant make yourself heard a hundred yards away if you shout, but if we get up the hill a little way we can hear very well.

At the end of our two months waiting we set to work at once but the weather became very bad this was in July. I went one day alone in the rain but the mud & rain made it so tiresome going up the track that before I had got far enough I thought I must be there, and turned off into the bush, I found my way down to the creek but missed the reef. I followed the water downwards hoping to find it, this was slow and rather tiresome work I being encumbered by an oilskin coat to keep out the wet, I could not find it at all, and I returned somewhat disgusted with myself for being principal owner in a property which I was unable to find alone.

When I next went I had someone to show me and took more care to note the proper place to leave the track so as to know my way better in future.

The first thing to be done was to build a whare to shelter ourselves in when it rained and as a place to leave our tools &c in, so I and Mr [James] Munro went down and chose a spot on the hill side just above our present work, [in August].

---

271 John Squirrel, diary, entry for August 1888, Hawkins Family Papers.
thing was to level a site, no easy task, as first the ground was covered with roots and under them was full of stones, however with tomahawk, pick and shovel we finally made some level ground, then we had to cut down a lot of straight young trees in short and long lengths to build our frame with. We took a good straight growing tree about 4 inches thick which we left in the ground and used for one end setting a pole at the opposite end of the ground and nailing a ridge from the standing tree to the pole. When dinner time came we found we had excellent appetites, and after feeding I laid down my waterproof and stretched myself on the ground awhile, while Mr Munro had a smoke, I looked up through the bright green foliage, the sun was shining on the tops of the trees, and the blue sky peeping through, the white clouds were skudding along overhead showing a good breeze outside but we were sheltered down below, while lying there I came to the conclusion that this sort of thing was decidedly superior to sitting in an office in dingy London, that in short it was work & picnic combined, and at this stage decidedly pleasant, but we soon jumped up & went on with our house, the next day we had to hunt for nikau trees to make our thatch of, at first we didn’t run across any but by and bye we found about half a dozen and soon had them down. I as a new chum bushman distinguished myself by making my tree fall the wrong way on to several other trees the peculiar result of which was that while the bottom end went up in the air the top part which I wanted didn’t come down so I had to cut down a few more trees to get at it, then we stopped to have a free feed out of the inside of the top, which was something like raw turnip with a nutty sort of flavor, I wasn’t hungry enough to care for it, but to any one lost in the bush it must be very pleasant, if they only have the means of cutting down the trees to get at it. Then we cut off the long leaves and partly slid & partly carried them down the hill and made our roof I seating myself astride the ridge pole & tacking them on with nails, there was a wandering white cow with a bell on which disturbed my equanimity as I was afraid it might be fond of nikau leaves and eat our thatch which came down nearly to the ground but it didn’t. When we had finished the outside we put up the frames of three bunks, we had put canvas on the roof under the thatch this was old drapery wrappers, so our cabin is covered all over with my name and address, and there will be no doubt about the ownership of the mansion in the mind of any wandering stranger who may take refuge there - we have not put any door on yet, I suppose in time we shall have it properly padlocked as the other miners huts are. Then to work with pick & shovel, drill & gad, fuse & dynamite, waking the echoes of this silent land with our reports, and sending messages to those below letting the world know that something was going on up in the hills, we first shovelled a floor in front of the reef, and decided to put in a charge of dynamite, the question arose who was to hold the drill and who to strike the heavy hammer. If I struck & missed Mr Munro's hand wouldn't have been much use for that day at least, and if he struck & missed my hand mightn't have been of much use any more at all, I declined however to run the risk of hitting him, and he said there was no chance of his missing, so I held the drill and he hammered away, after each blow I had to take out the drill an inch or so, turn it round and put it back firmly in time for the next blow while he struck about once in 2 seconds, we have to stop every two or 3 minutes to clear the hole out & put water in it, it takes from 20 min to 1/2 an hour to get in the length of the drill, when my hand has no room to hold the drill any longer we have to stop - then the dynamite is put in and the detonating cap, then the fuse & after stopping up the rest of the hole with dirt & ramming it in we set light to it and ran to some hole in rock round a corner & wait a minute, then follows a powerful report and the fragments fly in showers like a rain of bullets in a battle, we wait a minute for the smoke & fumes to clear off and go to see what work is done, a big piece or two thrown down and a lot of cracks in the reef which make it possible for us to get out a lot more quartz with our picks, sometimes we pull down a big lump and have to jump out of the way sharp to prevent our legs from being damaged, we lay them up on a pile till the time comes when the [Champion Company's] furnace will be erected down below, then we can send these heaps down, to be smelted, and get our money for them, whether they will pay for the expense or not remains to be seen. Munro strikes the hammer with his right hand and I with my left, but I am learning to do both as a good miner should, of course I have plenty to learn at first of the ways of doing things, we supposed we were mining for silver ore but after a few days work I bought a prospecting dish which is an iron pan which they wash stuff in when looking for gold, Munro tried some loose sand in it down in the creek and the next minute I heard him shouting with delight come here come here! I went and he pointed out grains of gold in the dish, we said O be joyful, and several times in the day and since then we have tried occasionally but have seen no more, but it infused a vein of extra hope into the proceedings, after getting out a ton or two of the kind of the ore this reef was composed of, we decided to try somewhere else. The next reef we started on was of a different sort what is called a Galena reef that is with a good deal of lead in it, we worked on this for a day and got out about a ton of stuff one chunk weighed about 2 cwt and we had to take care of our toes when that came down, we did not need to use dynamite with this reef, the ore is embedded in stone of a softer kind we have to get this out with the pick all round the harder quartz, as we generally work underneath the portion we want we have to call out when we see it is coming down, and we jump out of the way to save our legs and toes, all outside pieces we send tumbling down the hill and the quartz with mineral in it we stack up in a pile ready to be smelted some day.

We have seen Mr [Alexander] Parkes\textsuperscript{272} who was paid £1000 to come here and superintend the putting up of the furnaces for smelting, he is supposed to be very clever on metals we showed him pieces from 3 different reefs and he spoke well of them and took away about 1/4 of a cwt to be tested in his furnace at Karangahake, we are still waiting to know the result.

The reefs are rather puzzling, they are generally supposed to follow a straight course yet we lose them sometimes and can’t find them in a hurry, we tunnelled into the ground for one just where we thought it ought to be, taking the line from where we found it a short way off, and three of us were working most of the day and could not find it - some days we spend hours prowling about trying the surface of the ground & breaking the stones which we see in the ground in order to discover new reefs if possible, as the more we find the greater will be the value of the ground, in the mean time we are under the rules of the mining act which enables the government to cause our property to be forfeited if not being worked by a number of men, and this would be beyond our means to pay for, more than a month or two, this seems hard, but it is wise & necessary otherwise all the mining ground would be locked up for speculative purposes, we get the ground on very moderate terms, but we must make good use of it or give it up to those who will, in order that the country may prosper, and work may be found for as many hands as possible.

One man has ground on which lies big boulders with metals in them and he has been looking for the reef for 2 years out of which they came, but can’t find it, we also have big boulders in our creek full of mineral, and as yet we are uncertain whether they fell down from a reef up above or whether they are the top of reef lying under the creek, there are many things to puzzle us but they will be found out in time, I have had to knock off for a week to get my spring sowing done at home, unfortunately this week has been mostly wet, perhaps my partners have been at work, but I don’t think so, when I don’t go no one goes, so I must make another start in a day or two.

The girls have named our new kitten “Tui” in honour of the mine and I hope the cat won’t turn out to have a bad name.\textsuperscript{273}

\textsuperscript{272} See paper on the Tui mines.

\textsuperscript{273} Squirrell, ‘Mining at Tui Creek’, pp. 2-4 of typescript.
That they wanted to discover new reefs because ‘the greater will be the value of the ground’ implied an intention to sell rather than work their claim. On 1 September, it was reported that ‘Messrs Squirrell and Munro have commenced operations on the Silver Queen Licensed Holding, Tui, and already discovered reefs’.\textsuperscript{274} Their hopes of using a Parkes furnace were dashed when his furnace at Karangahake was closed down in November after only three weeks’ work and Parkes himself left the colony,\textsuperscript{275} never to return. In Squirrell’s words, ‘Mr Parkes the expert on whom we built our hopes has suddenly vanished to Queensland and the furnace which was to be built to smelt our ore has vanished likewise that is to say it wont be erected at present’.\textsuperscript{276}

On 24 December, he wrote that ‘as respects the mining there is nothing much to report, up to the present it has been all trouble & expense and nothing likely to be got out of it yet’.

I am still working several days in the week in the mines, but if some good does not soon come out of it shall have to give it up, it wants capital to do the work as there is no visible gold like in Australia, but it has to be extracted by very costly processes about £30,000 is being spent at Waiorongomai in erecting Batteries crushing machines furnaces &c with immense chimneys, and if these works succeed we shall do, if they fail we shall have to vegetate again and live on our own cabbages for 5 or 10 years till some other industry turns up to maintain the families who will eat our produce.

A few months ago we thought our mine would turn out well, a clever mineralogist Mr A Parkes was paid £1000 to come here to set up a patent furnace which was to make our fortunes but although the furnace was erected and was reported a perfect success it immediately afterwards stopped & Mr Parkes flitted in [to] Queensland, and our hopes died down to nothing, we had given him some of our ore & he spoke highly of it, one mine near ours is floated into a company and some thousands are being spent in wages on it, but we haven’t the money to do anything with ours....

Some day I will send you some mineral specimens from our mines here, the awkward part of the affair is that what looks so well is not worth much, and the richest stone I should throw away not being able to tell its value, there is no end of glitter in the stone \textsuperscript{274} Te Aroha News, 1 September 1888, p. 2.

\textsuperscript{275} Te Aroha News, 10 November 1888, p. 2, 14 November 1888, p. 3, 24 November 1888, p. 2, Ohinemuri Correspondent, 4 December 1888, p. 2.
\textsuperscript{276} Squirrell, ‘Mining at Tui Creek’, p. 4 of typescript.
and specks that look something like gold, but it is always something else.

At the warden’s court hearing of 2 April 1889, the mining inspector applied for the forfeiture of the ground for non-working.278 ‘John Squirrell said he and Jas. Munro (a shareholder), had done a good deal of work on the ground. Donald Munro, however, had never done anything to assist in working the property. If allowed a little further time he thought he would be able to arrange for having the ground worked’.279 Another report quoted him arguing that the license should not be cancelled. He pointed out that they had four reefs to work on, had taken out several tons of stuff, and had been assured by Mr Parkes that it was valuable, but when after that gentleman rather unexpectedly departed, it did cast a damper on the shareholders. The claim had cost him, personally, £70 and if he could get others to join him, and get rid of one shareholder who had done nothing, the ground would be sufficiently manned.280

The warden, after noting that the claim was ‘off the general run of reefs, and in comparatively new country’, granted an adjournment for one month.281 Shortly after this hearing, in a postscript to his letter with the heading ‘Mining at Tui Creek’, Squirrell wrote that the break down of the Parkes furnace, which was erected and failed to extract the gold & silver took all the steam out of us and we left off working, the mining inspector has dropped down on us for not working the ground, and claimed to have it forfeited, I appeared at the Court and defended myself, he gave me a months grace to see what I can do, if I can’t get some one into it with money I shall have to abandon it, Somebody will make a fortune out of it some day.282

277 John Squirrell to ‘Harry’ (Bradley), 24 December 1888, John Squirrell Papers, MS 288, Library of the Auckland Institute and War Memorial Museum.
278 Te Aroha Warden’s Court, Plaint Book 1880-1898, 9/1889, BBAV 11547/1a, ANZ-A.
279 Warden’s Court, Te Aroha News, 3 April 1889, p. 2.
280 Warden’s Court, Waikato Times, 6 April 1889, p. 2.
281 Warden’s Court, Te Aroha News, 3 April 1889, p. 2.
282 Squirrell, ‘Mining at Tui Creek’, (April 1889 postscript), p. 4 of typescript.
The last comment reinforced the fact that, as was clear from his earlier remarks, he had little if any knowledge of geology, a lack of expertise shared by James Munro and many others mining at Tui. At the subsequent warden’s court sitting, as he admitted not being able to make satisfactory arrangements to work the ground, it was forfeited, although the rent paid, £15, still had three months to run.283

In his last attempt to make money from mining, in October 1895, during the boom, he applied for the Golden Queen at Tui, being 30 acres ‘formerly known as Silver Queen’, but almost three weeks later withdrew the application ‘as I find it was previously pegged out by another’.284

WAIORONGOMAI MINING

In July 1888, Squirrell applied, along with James Munro and two miners, a blacksmith, a farmer, and a hotelkeeper, for the Celtic at Waiorongomai, which was granted on 7 August,285 and never heard of again. In November, Munro applied for Beelzebub, one man’s ground, which was granted on 18 December.286 On 1 January 1889, it was re-registered with four owners, one of them Squirrell, each having a quarter interest. Four months later, Squirrell bought the interest of one of the owners.287 This claim immediately vanished into obscurity also. In March 1889, he applied for 15 acres on behalf of the Oceana Gold and Silver Mining Company, adjacent to Peter Ferguson’s Special Claim,288 declaring that he would invest £500 in working it.289 He was granted the Oceana at the same hearing that deprived him of the Silver Queen.290 A month later, he successfully applied for permission to prospect it with two men for three 283 Warden’s Court, Te Aroha News, 1 May 1889, p. 2; Te Aroha Warden’s Court, Register of Licensed Holdings and Special Claims1887-1909, folio 27, BBAV 11500/8b, ANZ-A.

284 Te Aroha Warden’s Court, Mining Applications 1895, 38/1895, BBAV 11582/4a, ANZ-A.
285 Te Aroha Warden’s Court, Register of Applications 1883-1900, 55/1888, BBAV 11505/1a, ANZ-A; John Squirrell, diary, entry for (?) 17 May 1888, Hawkins Family Papers.
286 Te Aroha Warden’s Court, Register of Applications 1883-1900, 136/1888, BBAV 11505/1a, ANZ-A.
287 Te Aroha Warden’s Court, Register of Te Aroha Claims 1880-1888, folio 328, BBAV 11567/1a, ANZ-A.
288 See paper on Peter Ferguson and his New Era.
290 Warden’s Court, Te Aroha News, 26 June 1889, p. 2.
In January 1890, when the mining inspector sought its forfeiture for non-working, Squirrell agreed that the license should be cancelled because ‘at the present moment I cannot see my way clear to carry on work’.

HIS GORDON FARM

Mining having depleted, not enhanced, his finances, he returned to farming by joining the Gordon Special Settlement Association. In 1892, George Robert Beeson, a Waiorongomai carpenter, asked permission to transfer two sections at Gordon to Squirrell, who, according to Beeson, was planning to establish a branch store there. The area acquired, 97 acres one rood and 38 perches, adjoined the river, and cost him £165. It was largely undeveloped. In March 1890, Beeson informed the Ranger that he had sown 15 acres with grass seed, but when inspected in March 1892 ‘the land said to have been sown was overgrown with Rushes and Titree. It could not be considered cultivation’. Beeson, who had never lived on the land, in 1892 claimed to have burnt off and surface sown about 30 acres with grass seed, 20 of which was ‘in splendid grass’, to have planted 150 shelter trees and 60 fruit trees, and to have ploughed 10 acres. Benjamin Bayley, the Crown Lands Ranger, discovered a house valued at £10, two 291 Te Aroha Warden's Court, Register of Applications 1883-1900, 42/1889, BBAV 11567/1a, ANZ-A; Warden's Court, Te Aroha News, 26 June 1889, p. 2.

---

292 Te Aroha Warden's Court, Plaint Book 1880-1898, 11/1890, BBAV 11547/1a; John Squirrell to Clerk of Court, 1 February 1890, Te Aroha Warden's Court, Plaints 1890, 11/1890, BBAV 11572/2a, ANZ-A.
294 G.R. Beeeson to Commissioner of Crown Land, 20 November 1892; Memorandum by Ranger, 6 December 1892, Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.
295 Lands and Survey Department, Certificate of Title Under Land Transfer Act (with map), Register Book, vol. 86 folio 4, Land Information New Zealand, Hamilton; John Squirrell to Commissioner of Crown Lands, 1 December 1893, Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A; Terese McLoughlin and Gladys Davison, Gordon Centenary 1884-1984 (Matamata, 1984), pp. 3-4.
296 See Evening Post, 20 June 1890, p. 3; New Zealand Herald, 30 July 1903, p. 5.
acres ploughed, and twenty chains of drain dug, making a total valuation of £39.

Officials soon doubted whether Squirrell intended to settle there, or whether he, like other members of the association, was holding land for speculative purposes. He certainly wanted to retain his land against what he believed to be a conspiracy to deprive him of it. His long letter of 1 December 1893 to the Commissioner of Crown Land in Auckland made dramatic charges and revealed his plans. ‘From information I recd a few days ago I learned that a conspiracy was on foot to get my section forfeited and that the parties concerned in it had got at the ranger and given him false information and now the statement is going round the settlement that my section is to be forfeited’. He claimed to have done all the improvements required for one year ‘by putting a main drain through the centre of the section at a cost of £10 besides other smaller improvements’, and had spent £180 ‘for past payments and improvements’. When Bayley, visited, in his absence, he was shown over the land by a man ‘who must have shown him as little as possible’ and had misinformed him about the work done.

It must have been the owner of the next section who did me this service as he has been trying ever since I bought to induce me to sell it to him and the last time he offered me £35 bonus to sell it to him & all cash down, but I told him I had bought it for use & not for speculation, he then said well “youll be turned off it in less than 6 months” there are 3 of these men hanging together, who were threatening to have other settlers' properties forfeited unless their land was sold to them. Squirrell admitted to only one defect: ‘a house of sawn timber 14 x 10 with door, chimney, and window, but I am not at present actually living in it although I make use of it, it has been lived in for months together since my occupation, but not by me personally’. He planned to erect a permanent residence. The Ranger had warned him, that as Beeson had not resided permanently either, the land was liable to forfeiture. ‘I could not understand his tone of hostility to me the first time he had seen me & before he had seen over the section, but from what I heard after I concluded that the Chairman of the settlement’, Bernard

\[297\] Memorandum by Benjamin Bayley (Ranger), 6 December 1892; G.R. Beeson to Commissioner of Crown Lands, 20 November 1892, Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.
Montague,298 ‘had prejudiced him as he was working on the road at the time, and he is very mad with me for being opposed to him in politics just now, when he was using every effort to make every Gordon Settler vote one way, which they did with the exception of myself’. (They had voted for the Seddon Government.) Squirrell’s informant did not name the members of the conspiracy against him, but did not deny the three names Squirrell mentioned to him. The Ranger told me himself on the road that he saw 20 acres in grass while passing yet I was told afterwards that he was going to report that there was only 7 or 8 acres’. Squirrell reported having ‘16 grown beasts shut in there for 10 months and they had calves to the number of 6 more and as the land is not heavily grassed it would require 30 acres in grass to have carried them, & kept them growing & fat, as they are, and besides my son in law’, David Foughey,299 ‘put in other cattle part of the time’. He had dug a drain 21 chains long, but another person had told Bayley that he had only made one of 10 chains, the remainder being an existing creek. ‘I told the Ranger that if there was a deficiency in the improvements in the past I must make it up but I think it should be shown that such is the case, but as regards insufficiency of residence on the part of the last owner it is impossible for me to go back in point of time & put that right’. He hoped that another of his daughters would ‘be married before long and go to live on this section near her married sister’, Mary Alice Foughey, in which case both the husbands & the wives would help each other.... I am expecting my prospective son in law every day to confer with me on the subject, and as he is a good carpenter the first thing he would do would be to build a proper dwelling house, but as this is not quite settled I could not very well tell the ranger about it, but when the young man comes from Auckland, and hears it reported all over the place that the section is to be forfeited, he may be afraid to put his capital into it.

He denied any intention of going against government policy by using his section for speculation, although I have been offered a good bonus & could make £50 by selling it, I do not intend to make one penny out of my son in law (if the marriage comes off) as while offering it to him at less than the price offered me by another I have arranged to return to my 298 See paper on his life.

daughter any amount left over the original cost, after paying for subsequent improvements, I will be able to make it easy for him to take the whole thing, cattle & all, & pay as convenient to him, in all this I am trying to carry out the wishes of the government and making sacrifices personally, but my object in life is to see my children settle comfortably & safely.\footnote{John Squirrell to Commissioner of Crown Lands, 1 December 1893, Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.}

(This marriage did not eventuate, and only one other daughter was married, in 1906, to an Auckland carpenter, not a Waiorongomai farmer.)\footnote{Marriage Certificate of Edith Beatrice Squirrell to Joseph Hawkins, 15 June 1906, 1906/3156, BDM.}

Squirrell sought assurance that his title was secure and that we are not at the mercy of the 3 or 4 conspirators who have been making a sort of reign of terror in the settlement for the last 2 years by threatening anyone not in their particular swim with forfeiture, the chief of the 3 is the Chairman of the Settlement who was formerly a member of the fenian organization in Ireland and seems to have a special talent for intrigue & intimidation.

The letter concluded with a list of improvements made by Beeson and himself.\footnote{John Squirrell to Commissioner of Crown Lands, 1 December 1893, Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.} Whether the chairman, Montague, was ever a Fenian is not known, but he was born in Belfast, his wife was born in County Clare, they were Roman Catholics, and he publicly supported Home Rule for Ireland.\footnote{Death Certificates of Johanna Montague, 9 January 1904, 1904/627; Bernard Montague, 18 August 1912, 1912/5823, BDM; Register of Te Aroha Baptisms 1884-1949, nos. 4, 20, 45, 76, Catholic Archives, Auckland; \textit{Te Aroha News}, 19 August 1911, p. 2.}

Eleven days after this long letter was written, an anonymous letter in Squirrell's handwriting was sent to the Commissioner of Crown Lands. A copy of a letter from Beeson about the latter's improvements, it included the comment, ‘I can quite understand those two men trying their best to cause a forfeiture, of course B --- wants it, and the other man is a tool in his hands'.\textsuperscript{304} B --- clearly was Barney, as Bernard Montague was commonly known.\textsuperscript{305}

The chief clerk’s memorandum of 8 January 1894 recorded that there was no indication the house had been lived in for a long time, half the chimney was down, no improvements had been made, and Squirrell was not living on the land. Bayley, who did not expect him to live there because his store was some miles away, denied being hostile, but ‘from his long connection with Official life’ asked questions ‘sharply ... with a view of getting his work done quickly’.\textsuperscript{306} Consequently, the commissioner informed Squirrell that his land would be inspected in July and that arrears of rent must be paid and improvements made or the land would be forfeited.\textsuperscript{307} Three days later, Squirrell claimed he had not been told how much he owed, and enclosed the amount. He went through the Bayley’s report point-by-point, disagreeing with every one, but did promise to improve the house and to keep a record of his personal occupation. As to having a business seven miles away,

I had occasion years ago to build a store at Shaftesbury when there were many people there, who have since left, (about 30 houses having been pulled down & removed since) and as that was the 2nd move I had made in this district I do not wish to build at present another large store on the Gordon Settlement, my old store is a half way house from Te Aroha (whence all the Goods come) and my sister lives there, and can watch the goods during my necessary absences, but he is under an entire misconception about my business being 7 miles away as 3/4ths at least of my business is on the Gordon settlement, I am 2 days a week on the settlement all day delivering goods & doing other work, and two other days in the week I go to Te Aroha & Waiorongomai to sell the Gordon Settlers Butter &c & to fetch them bread & meat & to do other things for them, thus 4 days out of 6 every week (all the year round without any exception) are \textsuperscript{304} Anonymous [copy by John Squirrell of letter from George Robert Beeson] to Commissioner of Crown Lands, 12 December 1893, Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.

\textsuperscript{305} See ‘Barney and his Cow’, Te Aroha News, 29 August 1888, p. 2.

\textsuperscript{306} Memorandum by Chief Clerk, 8 January 1894, Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.

\textsuperscript{307} Commissioner of Crown Lands to John Squirrell, 22 January 1894, Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.
spent either on or in connection with, the Gordon settlement, & on the other 2 I may be there or I may be at my sisters. The Store, House, & small farm, at Shaftesbury are really my sister’s, as it is her money that is in them, and I can’t remove her to the Gordon, as there are no shelter trees there, she is 60 years old and could not sleep in the storms which we have here, they are very violent and 3 or 4 houses have been blown down by them since I have lived in this district.

Although denying not having made any improvements, he promised to make up any deficiencies ‘as fast as possible’ and complained that Bayley had taken his information ‘from a Settler who had threatened to get me turned off if I refused to sell the section to him’.308 Asked for his response, Bayley noted that Squirrell’s statement about the house is absolutely untrue the Chimney was down & the house such as it was not fit for a dog kennel in the next place I went over the ground alone where I could not ride I walked I carefully inspected it all by myself took no information from any one & not one iota of my Report is incorrect to the minutest particular & his own letter convicts himself of breaches of both residential improvement & rental conditions.309

Accordingly, the Commissioner informed Squirrell that most of his letter was irrelevant, he must make improvements, and someone must live on the land.310

This prompted another long letter from Squirrell claiming he had bought timber and ‘arranged with a man to line, ceil, & otherwise improve the small house wh. I will paint myself when Done’. He had taken posts to fence ‘a good sized paddock, which I will clear myself & I have arranged with a man to plough it, when it must be left fallow till the spring’. Arrangements had been made with others for more ploughing and draining, but, as for supplying a registered substitute, 308 John Squirrell to Commissioner of Crown Lands, 25 January 1894, Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.

309 Memorandum by Benjamin Bayley, n.d. [February 1894]. Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.
310 Commissioner of Crown Lands to John Squirrell, 14 March 1894, Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.
I am quite unable to pay a man to permanently work “government stroke” & must do my own residence, as far as it must be done, under any circumstances as soon as the house is completed, I shall do a certain amount of day residence, when working there, and also will use it as a deputy store in connection with the business I do on the settlement, but under the circumstances reported to you I still hope to be allowed to sleep on my 40 acre Section, on account of the dangerous state of my daughter.

(The last, unexplained, comment referred to Constance Elizabeth, as explained later.) In conclusion, he insisted that he was ‘straining every nerve & will continue to do so. I did not at first know how the conditions really stood, could you not let me have a copy of the conditions with the plan on it, same as supplied to other settlers’. He added a postscript that the government had previously ordered him to build a house and reside on his 40 acres at Shaftesbury and that ‘some modification in the Land Act should be made to meet such cases’.311 The Commissioner responded that there was ‘no necessity whatever to give me all the details of your business. I do not wish to go into them as they only concern yourself, but I must insist upon the conditions of Residence and Improvement being complied with’.312

In May 1894 Squirrell had become secretary of the Gordon Special Settlement Association. Montague, the chairman, in the following month attended a meeting of the Crown Lands Board ‘as a deputation from the Association’ to complain that absenteeism was preventing the establishment of dairying. He claimed only ten of the 24 settlers lived on their land and that those who had settled ‘had to barter their butter to the storekeepers for groceries, as money was not obtainable’.313 Squirrell immediately repudiated these claims, citing himself as an example of virtuous toil:

The Gordon settlers were very much astonished and intensely disgusted to read in your paper that “a deputation from the Gordon Special Settlement Association had interviewed the Land Board, etc.” The Gordon Special Settlement Association has a committee of 7 persons, and six of them know nothing of this unauthorized proceeding. I have not been able to find a single 311 John Squirrell to Commissioner of Crown Lands, 23 March 1894, Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.

312 Commissioner of Crown Lands to John Squirrell, 9 May 1894, Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.
313 New Zealand Herald, 6 June 1894, p. 6.
settle up to the present who will own to having had anything to do with sending a deputation, and it is quite clear that one member of the committee, unknown to the rest, and without the knowledge of the settlers generally, has slipped away to Auckland and hoaxed the Land Board into believing him to be deputed by the settlers, his object being to injure his neighbours by turning them off their land, in order that he and his few friends may apply for the forfeited sections to add to their cattle runs. It is further stated in your paper that a list has been sent of these so-called “absentees” to Wellington, we can only guess who are in this list, but if the bogus deputationist had the preparation of it, some of the best settlers of the place are on it. I have no doubt but what my name has a place of honour on the list, the “evictor” of the settlement having a special animosity to me, and this is the kind of “absentee” I am: I sleep in my house on the Gordon Settlement several nights each week, for some time past I have been on my section nearly every day except the 2 days a week that I go to Te Aroha and Waiorongomai to sell the Gordon settlers’ butter, and to bring back bread, meat and other goods for the Gordon Settlement; besides my whole time being devoted to this settlement. I have now a man working with 3 horses and a double-furrow plough, another man clearing and burning, and even my daughter is helping in the work of clearing.

(She was probably Mary Alice, wife of David Foughey, who also farmed at Gordon.)

Yet while we are all hard at work on the Settlement, an enemy is conspiring to turn us off as absentees.... The fact is, the settlement for the last 2 years has been quite a success, and the only trouble it now suffers from is that one man whose heart seems full of hatred to his fellows, is simply going mad with his insane desire to get certain settlers “evicted” whom he happens to dislike, and he seems to stick at nothing to effect his purpose.314

Acting quickly, Squirrell obtained the signatures of 17 of the 22 settlers, including all members of the committee apart from Montague, to a petition expressing their ‘disgust and indignation’ at his going to the board and attempting ‘to injure his brother settlers by getting them off their land’. Montague was also asked to resign as chairman, not only because of this behaviour but also because he had ‘never been elected by a majority of the association’. Squirrell’s letter to an Auckland newspaper was condensed before publication:

314 Te Aroha News, 9 June 1894, press cutting in Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.

The Association has a committee of seven, of which he is one, and none of the other six knew of this “deputation” till they read it in the paper, to their intense disgust and astonishment. Out of 22 settlers, only three or four besides Mr Montague knew of his design. He spoke as on behalf of the settlers, and recounted various grievances (which do not exist) and made statements which were not true. The principal statement made by him was that there were 24 settlers, of whom 14 were absentee. Now I have challenged him in the local paper to mention the names of, not 14, but 4 settlers who are both absentee and non-improvers. In his address to the Board, he said the settlement was “languishing,” and couldn’t live because of these absentee, but the settlement has been fairly prosperous for the last two years. There was a time when the settlers seemed hardly able to hold on, but a man who is now denounced as an absentee came upon the scene, and spent about £300 on a flaxmill and on the land connected with it, which set the place quite on its feet. Nearly all the settlers benefited by this expenditure, and some of those who benefited most are now eager to get these sections forfeited, although money is still being spent on them; but, because the owner is absent, he is attacked by these men, who have no sense of gratitude.

When Bayley visited his land on 2 July, Squirrell signed a declaration that he had lived on his selection from 12 April until that date. Bayley reported that the necessary cultivations had been completed and ‘Substantial Improvements effected’, that the rent was paid to date, and he was living there. ‘He resides some 4 days on Selection during week remainder of time on road or at Shaftesbury had opened another small store on Selection’. Accordingly, the commissioner told Squirrell that the only thing preventing the issuing of a Crown Grant was proof that he or a registered substitute had lived on the land for six years.

315 John Squirrell to Commissioner of Crown Lands, 14 June 1894, 19 June 1894, with appended petitions, Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.
316 Letter from John Squirrell [condensed], New Zealand Herald, 27 June 1894, p. 6.
317 Declaration re Deferred Payment Selection, 2 July 1894, Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.
318 Benjamin Bayley, Report for July 1894, Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.
319 Commissioner of Crown Lands to John Squirrell, 4 August 1894, Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.
Three days later, Montague’s response to Squirrell’s having convinced Bayley that he was a bona fide settler was to write to the commissioner claiming it was the custom in this settlement when the Crown Lands Ranger comes into the Settlement the absentees also come into the settlement although they have not being in the Settlement for months or years and when the Ranger presents them with the residential declaration they sign it and Clear out again. Under these circumstances we Respectfully ask your Bord for a inquirey and all the Bonafid settlers will give evedince if wanted.\(^{320}\)

Bayley described Montague’s claim as ‘a wild assertion’. Although absentees did arrive when he visited, on the last occasion ‘the only reputed Absentee who signed any Declaration was John Squirrell ... & as very strong ill feeling exists between Messrs Montague & Squirrell the reason for Mr Montague’s letter is very apparent’.\(^{321}\)

On the same day that Montague wrote to the commissioner, the New Zealand Herald’s Te Aroha correspondent reported on the ‘unsettled state’ of the settlers through some of them trying to have sections forfeited by those who, despite not living on the land, were making improvements. He was sure that the board would take a reasonable view of the matter, and decline to forfeit allotments upon which a fair amount of work has been done, and where there is every prospect of the owners eventually residing upon the land. There are men who will make first-class settlers, and are in a position to improve their land, so as to gradually prepare it for occupation, but who from various causes are unable at present to live upon it, and it seems a pity for a few jealous people to be able to annoy them by complaints to the Board.\(^{322}\)

The board did decide it ‘could not take cognisance of general and unsupported charges as made in this letter’.\(^{323}\) At the end of the month

\(^{320}\) Bernard Montague to Commissioner of Crown Lands, 5 July 1894, Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.

\(^{321}\) Commissioner of Crown Lands to Benjamin Bayley, 10 July 1894; Benjamin Bayley to Commissioner of Crown Lands, 10 July 1894, Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.

\(^{322}\) Te Aroha Correspondent, New Zealand Herald, 5 July 1894, p. 6.

\(^{323}\) New Zealand Herald, 24 July 1894, p. 3.
Squirrell responded to Montague’s claim that the correspondent knew nothing about this or any other deferred payment settlement:

Now, I ought to know something about the matter, being secretary of the Settlement, and having been in the thick of the fight for some time, and when I read the paragraph I thought it a remarkable good one, and I read it to several other Gordonites, and they also thought it very good indeed. I do not know who your correspondent is, he seems to be somewhat a mystery, but if all his paragraphs are as true, and as much to the point, he is a model correspondent. As regards Mr Montague, the facts have gone against him, so he is cross with the newspapers for recording the facts. He began by cursing the local papers, and now he abases yours. He doesn’t say what is wrong in the article referred to, but adopts the old legal maxim, “having no case, abuse the other side.” Since he wrote that letter he has ceased to be chairman, the settlers having met and turned him out. His constituting himself into a deputation to the Land Board without the knowledge of the settlers was too much for the community, and they have expelled him from the chairmanship and the committee, so the “engineer is hoist with his own petard.” 324

On 3 August, Montague, still writing as if he was the chairman of the association, again wrote to the press urging the board to enquire into the absentees. ‘We are thinking about publishing the names of those who have been doing this for years. We think that it is a pity that we should have to make enemies of our neighbours by moving in this matter’, for if the board and its officers ‘would do their duty, we would be good friends with our neighbours, and the settlement would go on all right’. 325 Squirrell did not respond. Confirmation that his assessment of Montague’s behaviour was not just personal bias came in a letter to the commissioner from an absentee. After explaining all the work he had done, he added that ‘anyone who knows Mr Montague’s deep cunning ways also knows quite well that he does not wish to see any of the absentees to settle down in the Gordon - all he wants is to get their land at little or nothing’. 326

In April 1895, Squirrell was re-elected as secretary of the association. 327 Two months later, he was a witness when Montague charged John Carroll with using provoking and insulting language at a meeting at Gordon chaired by Squirrell. Carroll worked at Waihi while his family lived 324 Letter from John Squirrell, New Zealand Herald, 30 July 1894, p. 3.

325 Letter from Bernard Montague, New Zealand Herald, 3 August 1894, p. 3.
326 S.B. Rosie to Commissioner of Crown Lands, July 1894 [received 11 July], Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.
327 Te Aroha News, 10 April 1895, p. 2.
at Gordon, and when asked whether Gordon was not ‘the most natural place for Mr Carroll to go to’, Squirrell answered: ‘Yes. But he doesn’t seem addicted to going to the most natural place. (Laughter in court)’.\textsuperscript{328} Elected to the committee in 1897,\textsuperscript{329} in the following year he was re-elected secretary when Montague was elected chairman once more.\textsuperscript{330} No more reports of clashes between these two have been traced, largely because most issues of the \textit{Te Aroha News} for these years have been lost. On 15 October 1897 he was granted a certificate of title to his land, but on 14 December the following year transferred it to John Brady, who owned the adjoining sections,\textsuperscript{331} despite his protestations of not being a speculator.

As a consequence of his involvement in farming, in 1901 he was elected to the committee of the Waikato Farmers Club.\textsuperscript{332} In 1905 he became secretary of the Manawaru Co-operative Dairy Company, incorporated in August 1901; he was not a shareholder.\textsuperscript{333} It faced competition from rival dairy factories in the district.\textsuperscript{334} In July 1909, in response to a suggestion that the company pay interest on its shares, Squirrell explained that ‘interest cannot be paid without taking part of the earnings derived from the milk of the present suppliers, and giving it to those who deserted’ it ‘and tried their best, at the time of leaving it, and afterwards, to wreck the Company, and very nearly succeeded in doing so’. After adding that the directors had decided to increase the bonus on the last two months of the season despite the price of butter having fallen, he concluded: ‘As to the other letter, by the funny man, who never signs his name, I do not consider it worth notice’.\textsuperscript{335}

\textsuperscript{328} Magistrate’s Court, \textit{Te Aroha News}, 5 June 1895, p. 2.
\textsuperscript{329} \textit{New Zealand Herald}, 9 April 1897, p. 3.
\textsuperscript{330} \textit{Te Aroha News}, 7 April 1898, p. 2.
\textsuperscript{331} Lands and Survey Department, Certificate of Title under Land Transfer Act, Register Book, vol. 86 folio 3, Land Information New Zealand, Hamilton; McLoughlin and Davison, pp. 3-4.
\textsuperscript{332} Company Files, BADZ 5181, box 164 no. 1026, ANZ-A; \textit{New Zealand Herald}, 27 November 1901, p. 6.
\textsuperscript{333} Company Files, BADZ 5181, box 164 no. 1026, ANZ-A; \textit{New Zealand Herald}, 15 November 1902, p. 7, advertisement, 10 March 1905, p. 8; \textit{Auckland Star}, 29 July 1903, p. 7; \textit{Te Aroha News}, 15 August 1905, p. 2.
\textsuperscript{334} \textit{Te Aroha News}, 7 August 1906, p. 2.
\textsuperscript{335} Letter from John Squirrell, \textit{Te Aroha News}, 3 July 1909, p. 3.
In contrast, a Manawaru correspondent argued that the company’s lack of success was caused by the fact that it had been formed to sell land rather than to make butter. 336 ‘Manawaruites’ believed it to be ‘a pity that our worthy neighbour, Mr J. Squirrell, should put our esteemed estimate of his veracity to be breaking point in regard to his pretentious statements’ about the ‘high payments and soundness of the company despite its balance sheet, which he had just issued, containing no provision ‘for paying a penny interest on the £1,222 18s 1d capital paid-up, or a penny for depreciation. The fact of their assets, property, machinery, and plant being assessed at cost price is a thing unheard of in any sound concern, and is quite sufficient to cause grave doubts in the minds of its shareholders as to its stability’. 337 ‘One of the Old Crew’ claimed that ‘the wrecking of the old tub was the almost criminal incompetency of its chief cook and officers to steer a safe and sound course’, and claimed that those in charge were paying bonuses to themselves from members’ money, not from bona-fide profits. ‘If the profits of one of the many ventures (Manawaru Co-op stares, I hardly need say, are not amongst those) of Mr Squirrell in the world of finance should drop to nil, it would mean a fit, and when his billet as shipswife to the old derelict with its emolument is dispensed with I am afraid he will have another one’. 338 (The only investment traced was ten shares (out of 25,000) in the National Glass Company, acquired in 1904.) 339

In a brief rebuttal to earlier statements, Squirrell denied that former shareholders (‘seceders’ was his term) had paid their shares in full: ‘They left long before they paid up their shares, and they only did that after a test case was taken into Court, and judgment was given against several of their number’. 340 Five days later, he responded to these latest letters about the ‘Squabble’ in detail. ‘I think it would have been better to have let sleeping dogs lie, but if the opponents of the Co-op will stir up these matters, they must take the consequences. “Manawaruite” states that I said the Co-op made high payments. I have not said this, nor have I made any comparisons between that and other companies’. As to his claim ‘that we have not paid interest on the paid-up capital, or a penny for depreciation’, the balance sheet published in the same edition of the newspaper included a 336 Manawaru Correspondent, Te Aroha News, 8 July 1909, p. 2.

337 Letter from ‘Manawaruites’, Te Aroha News, 10 July 1909, p. 3.
338 Letter from ‘One of the Old Crew’, Te Aroha News, 10 July 1909, p. 3.
339 Company Files, BADZ 5181, box 173 no. 1067, ANZ-A.
340 Letter from John Squirrell, Te Aroha News, 10 July 1909, p. 3.
‘depreciation reserve account’, which would ‘no doubt be much increased after the next directors’ meeting, as the necessary balance is in hand to do so’. As for the statement of ‘One of the Old Crew’ that the company was wrecked, it was ‘anything but that with ‘25 suppliers and 50 per cent more milk this year than last, and good prospects ahead’. Claims of dishonesty in its establishment were false:

Soon after I became secretary a special general meeting was called, and the discontented ones demanded that an enquiry into the affairs of the company be made right from the beginning by an impartial and competent auditor. The Directors agreed to the proposal, and the opposition was allowed to nominate their own man, and they voted 15 guineas as fee. Copies of his report and balance-sheet were distributed to every shareholder, and he completely exonerated the Directors from all the charges made against them, and finished up with a big puff to the Company, prophesying a bright career in the future, if the shareholders would work together. I have still spare copies of this report by me to prove that what I say is correct, and I may say that before he began his investigation I gave him the names of some of those who were leading the opposition, and he went to them, and heard all they had to say, before he began his work. I was determined to have a thorough investigation, as I did not know myself who was right. Now the partial break-up of the Company was caused by the spreading of a mass of falsehoods about things and people, everyone of which was proved to be untrue, but that made no difference, the mischief went on all the same, as temper had got the better of judgment.

He gave an example of how missing accounts, allegedly taken by the first chairman to hide his wrong doing, were held by a director who headed the ‘party who were spreading these wicked falsehoods against an innocent man’s character’. As for not paying interest, it had been ‘agreed that all profits shall go to those who bring milk’. He ended by claiming that some of the original shareholders had ‘deliberately tried to wreck the Company’.341

One week after this letter was published, the company agreed to go into liquidation, with Squirrell and two others appointed as its liquidators, and to amalgamate with the Thames Valley Co-operative Dairying Company, which took over its factory at Manawaru and its creamery at Wardville.342 Squirrell, still secretary as well as liquidator, wanted to make a call to raise money to pay all the debts, ‘but a party of Shareholders, who were fully paid up’, in 1911 started legal proceedings ‘to compel us to call up 342 John Squirrell to Registrar of Companies, 12 October 1909, Company Files, BADZ 5181, box 164 no. 1026, ANZ-A.

all shares in full, and divide the result equally among the Shareholders'. 343 As calls were paid slowly and one debtor, who was 'a good mark', kept taking legal action to avoid paying his share, the liquidation was not concluded until late 1913. 344

HOLDING STRONG OPINIONS ON A VARIETY OF TOPICS

As when living in England, Squirrell had a lively interest in a variety of issues, as indicated from the letters already cited. His obituary mentioned that 'he was an ardent student of Esperanto ... in which he was probably as well versed as anyone in the Dominion'. 345 He was a member of the British Esperanto Association until his death. 346 Another example of the variety of his interests was his letter to the Te Aroha News in 1902 that 'the comet was again visible last night in about the same position as when it first appeared'. 347 In a letter sent to England in 1886, he wrote that in 'the “Sword & trowel” of July 1886 (Mr [Charles] Spurgeon’s magazine) you will find an article on a holiday of his which will give you an idea of our picnics up in the range'. Having written 'with such enthusiasm about our Sunny South', he assured his brother-in-law that he did 'not forget the beauties (of a somewhat different kind) of old England, I am an ardent federationist, but naturally now feel a far greater interest in our Australasian portion of the empire'. 348 Two years later he sent the Christmas number of the Auckland Weekly News, a newspaper he purchased regularly, also a local paper which is now published twice a week, so we have rather too much newspaper I sometimes think, as they leave too little time for solid books. I do not find that the distance makes any difference in the interest I feel in European affairs and I often wish for more details on these subjects, but of course there

343 John Squirrell to Assistant Registrar of Companies, 19 July 1911, Company Files, BADZ 5181, box 164 no. 1026, ANZ-A.

344 John Squirrell to Assistant Registrar of Companies, 25 April 1912; John Squirrell to Registrar of Companies, 5 August 1913, Company Files, BADZ 5181, box 164 no. 1026, ANZ-A.

345 Te Aroha News, 9 August 1924, p. 4.

346 Envelope from this association sent to him when he was in Bonny Glen in Te Aroha glued inside back cover of his diary, Hawkins Family Papers.

348 John Squirrell to 'Harry' (Bradley), 2 October 1886, John Squirrell Papers, MS 288, Library of the Auckland Institute and War Memorial Museum.
is less interest felt generally, and I imagine if the people of this country were examined on the Bulgarian question they would mostly know as little about it as of the politics of the moon.\textsuperscript{349}

He was implying that he was interested in such topics but that there was nobody in the district with whom he could discuss them.

He continued to be interested in the 'Irish question', sending a letter to newspapers about this in December 1890.\textsuperscript{350} Auckland newspapers (the only ones to publish it) considered it to be so detailed that only 'a passage from his detailed scheme' could be published:

Let there be a mutual Imperial guarantee, the British Isles guaranteeing the integrity of the colonies, and the colonies guaranteeing the integrity of the British Isles. If the Irish leaders knew that the Colonial Empire had absolutely determined that there should be no diminution of the territory of the British headquarters, they would give up making any further attempt, either open or disguised, to obtain separation, and the Irish people would in the end become proud to form a part of that great Empire, to whose building up and maintenance so many eminent Irishmen have contributed, both in peace and war. As to Home Rule, once the danger of separation is absolutely done away with, the Irish could have as much Home Rule in the shape of local self-government as they required, and the English would be only too glad to get Irish local questions out of the Imperial Parliament. Let the population of the colonies agree to the proposal of a mutual Imperial guarantee, and let their determination be ratified by their respective Parliaments, and there would be an end for ever of the main difficulty in the way of the settlement of the Irish question. If the Irish leaders only want local self-government and not separation they will rally to this proposal, but if they oppose it, and fight against it, they would reveal their ultimate purpose, and must then run up their true colours. As to the land question, it must be settled by itself; there is the same problem there as here, namely, how to place the largest possible number of the people on a portion of land of their own, in a manner consistent with the principles of common honesty.\textsuperscript{351}

\textsuperscript{349} John Squirrell to 'Harry' (Bradley), 24 December 1888, John Squirrell Papers, MS 288, Library of the Auckland Institute and War Memorial Museum.

\textsuperscript{350} John Squirrell, diary, entry for December 1890, Hawkins Family Papers.

Presumably this was the same letter, or a variant of the same, that was published in a Suffolk newspaper that year.352

In May 1897 he wrote a long letter in response to the publication by the Te Aroha News of W.T. Stead’s articles on Queen Victoria’s reign. ‘As your article begins with something like a challenge to those wicked Radicals who assert that the Queen is only a figure head, I hope you will allow an insignificant Radical to reply to the challenge, and also to criticize Mr Stead’s somewhat apocryphal narrative’. He denied that the Queen had any role in decision making, smiled at the idea that the Emperor of Germany and everybody else in Europe considered her the ‘greatest, wisest, and best woman that ever sat on a throne’, and looked forward to the day when ‘the great British Imperial Federation’ was ‘properly organized’. He praised Prince Albert for his sagacity, noting that after his death the Queen ‘seemed completely lost’, and pointing out that on the only occasion when she attempted to have her own way over the choice of the members of her household, the Prime Minister, Peel, had defeated her. He referred to Stead’s claim that the Queen prevented war when Germany attacked Denmark in 1864, but provided no rebuttal.

I well remember the circumstances of this war, as I was much interested in it at the time. I attended the patriotic meetings of the Germans in London before the fighting began, and soon after its commencement visited the seat of war, but only got near enough to see the Danish prisoners and the German wounded brought away from the field. I then went on to Berlin, where I stayed two months reading the war news in the German papers, and also reading the English “Times” daily in the cafes where foreign papers were kept.

When the Danish Princess Alexandra, who married the Prince of Wales, first arrived in London, he had been standing on London Bridge, and he described the excitement. He denied that the Queen was skilled in languages, and compared the heroic Queen Louise of Prussia, who had roused her ‘somewhat feeble husband’ to fight against Napoleon, with ‘our Queen, with her comparatively easy and selfish life and her hoarded 20 millions worth of property’. The Jubilee Celebrations were a celebration of the power of a nation guided by its statesmen, not its queen, and ‘our great 352 John Squirrell, diary, entry for July 1891, Hawkins Family Papers.

Empire, which though nominally monarchical', was 'really republican'.\(^{353}\) As copies of the newspaper for this period have not survived, it is not possible to trace the controversy no doubt prompted by these opinions.

Being a self-confessed ‘old Radical’ did not mean he supported the Seddon Government, as he explained in an 1899 letter responding to the news that bank clerks were to be forbidden to work late hours:

I was a merchant's clerk in the City of London for 25 years before I came out here 20 years ago, and this class must be strangely different in the cities of New Zealand if they do not resent any interference on the part of the Government with their private affairs. I have many a time, with other clerks, stayed late in the evenings, when a rush of work had to be got through, and this we did entirely of our own accord, and without extra pay, doing it for our own credit, and that of the house to which we belonged, in order that it might be up to the mark in dealing with its correspondents, and on these occasions we would have been immensely astonished and disgusted if a city constable had marched in and asked us what business we had to be working late. It seems now that an attempt will be made to degrade every class of men into the supposed position of helpless victims, requiring protection by a paternal Government, and the constable will soon be poking his nose, not only into every factory and shop, but into every mercantile office, and last of all into the private homes, hitherto supposed to be a safe refuge from Government, so that we used to say that an “Englishman’s house was his castle.” Politics have changed now, so that the so-called Conservative party has become the advocate of personal freedom, while the sham Liberals are carrying a despotic interference into everybody's personal affairs, and many old Radicals like myself have to vote on the opposite to that which they belonged to in the Old Country.

The old tyranny had been replaced by that of ‘a democratic dictator’ who was destroying liberty ‘under a pretence of advancing progress’. Whilst agreeing that the government had both the right and the duty to interfere, say, in protecting women and children in factories, and in matters which greatly concern the health and well being of the people, but so far as people's personal affairs are concerned it is best to let everyone fight their own battles, the State simply keeping open a fair arena. We want

---

\(^{353}\) Press cutting of letter by John Squirrell dated 17 May 1897, Te Aroha News, n.d., in Te Aroha Warden's Court, Newspaper Clippings 1895-1905, BBAV 11532/1a, ANZ-A.
energy and self-reliance in the individual, and not a habit of looking to the Government for help.

He looked forward to the day when workers had ‘educated themselves into such a state of self-respect as themselves to resent such constant interference with their affairs’ and to fight their own battles.\(^{354}\) He claimed to be the only resident of Gordon not to vote for the Liberal Party.\(^{355}\)

The last examples of Squirrell’s political views that can be traced were his giving £2 2s in 1900 to the Patriotic Fund established to assist the British in the Boer War, by far the largest amount contributed by the residents of Shaftesbury,\(^{356}\) and, in 1914, his being voted to the chair at a meeting held at Shaftesbury by the conservative parliamentary candidate.\(^{357}\)

Whereas Squirrell had attended church in England and had debated theological issues fiercely, in New Zealand he was not recorded as being active in religious matters. Although he was given a Church of England funeral,\(^{358}\) possibly the choice of his children, in the 1880s he had assisted a Wesleyan temperance movement, the Band of Hope, by selling tickets for a concert for its organ fund and also participating in some of it’s entertainments at Shaftesbury.\(^{359}\) In October 1908, in replying to a letter about the importance of keeping the Sabbath Day holy, he forcibly supported the right of people to do gardening on a Sunday:

I have read in your paper that an inhabitant of Te Aroha, who prefers to hide his name, lately went prying about on a Sunday, looking over his neighbours’ fences to find out a worse man than himself in order that he might indulge in the luxury of condemning him, and seeing a man doing something useful invited society to boycott him, but no one seemed to respond, and one man had the courage to claim the right to do a little gardening on Sunday for the good of his health, and unlike the other signed his name like a man. He now makes a second \(^{355}\) John Squirrell to Commissioner of Crown Lands, 1 December 1893, Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.

\(^{356}\) Te Aroha News, 18 January 1900, p. 2.

\(^{357}\) Te Aroha News, 24 July 1914, p. 3.

\(^{358}\) Death Certificate of John Squirrell, 5 August 1924, 1924/5244, BDM.

\(^{359}\) Waiorongomai Band of Hope Minute Book 1883-1889, 3050/916, Methodist Archives, Auckland; Te Aroha News, 22 August 1885, p. 2.
attempt to persecute those who happen to differ from himself by saying "it is time that those in authority took a hand in this most objectionable habit." I quote his exact words, but of course he means the opposite to what he says, he doesn't want the authorities to take a hand in Sunday gardening, but to fine, or imprison the man who dares to do it. Well, I think the authorities would have a lot to do if they started that game. I myself often do a little gardening on a Sunday, as I think it promotes health of mind and body, besides producing something useful. I also get up at 5 o'clock on Sunday morning and later on take milk to the Factory. Bye-the-bye, does the nameless one ever eat factory butter, if so it is very wrong of him, as some of it comes from Sunday work; anyhow he should be thankful that he can lie in bed on a Sunday morning for the honour and glory of God, and when he does get up have nothing to do but pry into his neighbours’ back gardens and call upon society and the authorities to persecute those who are so industriously inclined that they find it difficult to do a loaf for a whole day, and who don’t think the Almighty is angry if they raise a flower or prune a tree.360

‘Respecter of the Sabbath’ was offended by what it considered his boasting about gardening on Sunday, and using phrenological terms retorted that evidently Squirrell’s ‘bump of aggressiveness’ was ‘equal to his bump of self-esteem’.361

HIS SISTER

In Squirrell’s first endeavours to make a successful home for his children in New Zealand he had been assisted by his sister, Pleasance Martha. She went to Auckland in September 1887, and in December the following year he wrote that she had ‘quite settled down in Auckland, and having a Baptist Church to attend and some Sunday School work’ seemed ‘more happy than when here’.362 Possibly because of ill-health, she made her will in Auckland in August 1889,363 and by 1893 if not earlier had returned to Shaftesbury, in January 1894 being recorded as living in Squirrell’s old 360 Letter from John Squirrell, Te Aroha News, 17 October 1908, p. 3.

361 Letter from ‘Respecter of the Sabbath’, Te Aroha News, 22 October 1908, p. 3.
362 John Squirrell, diary, entry for September 1887, Hawkins Family Papers; John Squirrell to ‘Harry’ (Bradley), 24 December 1888, John Squirrell Papers, MS 288, Library of the Auckland Institute and War Memorial Museum.
363 Probates, BBAE 1569/1852, ANZ-A.
store to guard his goods. In September that year, after suffering from dropsy and kidney disease for about 18 months, she died in Waikato Hospital, aged 60. A Te Aroha correspondent wrote that sincere regret was expressed in the Shaftesbury end of the district when it became known that Miss Squirrell ... had passed away at the Hamilton Hospital. Miss Squirrell was deservedly esteemed by all who knew her, and she will be much missed at Shaftesbury. She had been ailing for some time, and three weeks ago went over to Hamilton for treatment at the hospital, but rapidly became worse, and succumbed to dropsy and heart disease.

Her will, after leaving bequests to her English relatives and £5 to the Mt. Eden Baptist Chapel, gave the balance of her estate to Squirrell ‘to be divided equally between himself & his children, the children’s portions to be paid by him in such amounts and at such time as he shall think fit’ until they were aged 30, when they were to receive the balance of their shares. The total value of the estate, of which Squirrell was the executor, was £623 6s 3d. Of this, he received approximately two-thirds, which would have assisted him to develop his land at Gordon.

HIS DAUGHTERS

As mentioned in his 1886 and 1888 letters to his brother-in-law, his four daughters had assisted him when he first settled in Shaftesbury. Little is known about the eldest, Florence Maria. In January 1886, Squirrell recorded that ‘Florence came home for a fortnight from Wairoa South where she now lives with [her sister] Edith as assistants to Mrs Farley’. The latter, as noted in the section on the Shaftesbury farm, was an Anglican clergyman’s wife. In February and March 1888, Florence went to ‘Johnson’. She was living with her family at Shaftesbury in 1893, 364 Waikato Electoral Roll, 1893, p. 36; John Squirrell to Commissioner of Crown Lands, 25 January 1895, Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.

365 Death Certificate of Martha Pleasance Squirrell, 10 September 1894, 1894/3953, BDM.
367 Probates, BBAE, 1569/1852, ANZ-A.
368 Testamentary Registers 1892-1896, folio 121, BBCB 4208/3, ANZ-A.
369 John Squirrell, diary, entry for January 1886, Hawkins Family Papers.
370 John Squirrell, diary, entries for February and March 1888, Hawkins Family Papers.
although listed in the supplementary electoral roll rather than on the main roll like the others, suggesting that she had just returned from elsewhere. She remained at Shaftesbury until 1902, but was not recorded in the 1903 electoral roll. She appeared again on the rolls as a resident of Shaftesbury in 1905 and 1908, but left before 1911 and never returned. When she applied for aid on 23 January 1908 from the Auckland Charitable Aid Board, her incomplete request gave no reasons why she needed assistance, which accordingly was not given. According to a brother-in-law she was ‘mentally deficient’, and never married. During her last years she suffered from chronic Bright’s Disease or glomerulonephritis, a kidney disease, and died in the Knox Home in Auckland, after a long illness, on 30 March 1915 aged only 48.

The second daughter was Constance Elizabeth, the Bessie who had looked after her father’s Shaftesbury shop during the 1880s while he worked on his farm. Periodically she lived in Auckland with her aunt; the first time this was recorded was in April 1883. In 1888 an enigmatic diary entry was made: ‘Oct/Nov & before: Bess’. On 9 February 1890, he recorded: ‘Bess very bad’, with a later additional note: ‘(? Mind)’. On 27 December: ‘Bess came home’ (from Auckland). On 17 July 1891, she was charged under the Lunatic Act, 372 Bay of Plenty Electoral Rolls, 1896, p. 49; 1897, p. 47; 1899, p. 63; 1900, p. 60; Ohinemuri Electoral Rolls, 1902, p. 70; 1903, p. 61.

373 Ohinemuri Electoral Roll, 1905, p. 74; Tauranga Electoral Roll, 1908, p. 74; Ohinemuri Electoral Rolls, 1911, p. 125; 1914, p. 95; 1919, p. 110.
374 Auckland Hospital and Charitable Aid Board, Applications for Relief 1894-1907, folio 496, YCAB 15245/2a, ANZ-A.
375 Joseph Hawkins, Application for a Reception-Order, 16 May 1924, Case File on John Squirrell, Tokanui Mental Hospital, file 372, YCBG 5904/11, ANZ-A.
377 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 20 April 1883, Hawkins Family Papers.
378 John Squirrell, diary, entry for October/November 1888, Hawkins Family Papers.
379 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 9 February 1890, Hawkins Family Papers.
380 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 27 December 1890, Hawkins Family Papers.
but was discharged on the certificate of two doctors.\textsuperscript{381} Two days later her father recorded: ‘Bess to Mrs Hopkins’, with a later note: ‘ailing mentally’.\textsuperscript{382} In April 1892, he went to Auckland to see her, and April and August 1893 he visited her again, after which she returned home in October.\textsuperscript{383}

Bess was the unnamed daughter who, in early 1894, hoped to marry an Auckland carpenter.\textsuperscript{384} In March that year, Squirrell recorded ‘Bess getting troublesome’,\textsuperscript{385} and later that month wrote of ‘the dangerous state of my daughter’,\textsuperscript{386} presumably a reference to her mental state after the hoped-for (dreamed-up?) marriage was called off. In September 1898, when she was still living with her family, he charged her with lunacy, but as only one of the required two doctors would certify to her lunacy an order of committal was not made.\textsuperscript{387} In December, when he again charged her with being ‘a Lunatic Not under proper care and Control’, the doctors agreed, and she was committed to the Avondale Asylum.\textsuperscript{388} admitted at the age of 30 in ‘poor health and condition’, her occupation was given as dressmaker. Her dementia, diagnosed as being caused by hysteria, had started when she was 21 and had never ceased.\textsuperscript{389} She was probably suicidal and certainly violent, ‘throwing things at people’, and had been ‘under treatment at a private “home” in Remuera’. The first doctor certified that she was melancholic and had said that she had seen ‘the Prince of Wales a month ago & he was very nice to her’. Her sister Edith had deposed that she had ‘broken her windows & smashed up any article she could get hold of, at times very noisy \textsuperscript{381} Auckland Magistrate’s Court, Criminal Record Book 1891-1892, folio 70, no. 1114, BADW 10254/15a, ANZ-A.

\textsuperscript{382} John Squirrell, diary, entry for 19 July 1891, Hawkins Family Papers.
\textsuperscript{383} John Squirrell, diary, entries for 15 April, 24 August, 24 October 1893, Hawkins Family Papers.
\textsuperscript{384} John Squirrell to Commissioner of Crown Lands, 1 December 1893, Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.
\textsuperscript{385} John Squirrell, diary, entry for 10 March 1894, Hawkins Family Papers.
\textsuperscript{386} John Squirrell to Commissioner of Crown Lands, 23 March 1894, Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.
\textsuperscript{387} Te Aroha Magistrate’s Court, Criminal Record Book 1896-1907, 27/1898, BCDG 11220/1b, ANZ-A.
\textsuperscript{388} John Squirrell, diary, entries for 16, 17 December 1898, Hawkins Family Papers; Armed Constabulary Force, Return of Charges taken at Te Aroha Lock-Up 1880-1903, 16/1898, in private possession; Te Aroha Magistrate’s Court, Criminal Record Book 1896-1907, 33/1898, BCDG 11220/1b, ANZ-A.
\textsuperscript{389} Avondale Asylum, Register of Admissions 1896-1901, no. 2353, YCAA 1021/3, ANZ-A. shouting, crying alternatively. Talking to imaginary people. Her chief delusion is that she is being persecuted by men’. The second doctor certified that on the different occasions on which I have seen her she has all ways been in a condition of melancholy, and continually muttering & playing with her fingers. The appearance clearly indicates unsoundness of mind. Says she had a sister who died (This is not a fact). Says she has one brother (This is not a fact.)

Amongst other signs of madness was her claim that her uncle had recently been to see her, for she had no uncle in New Zealand. Her father wrote that ‘seven years ago she cut up her under clothing to make garments for a baby which she said she was going to have. Said the Prince of Wales had committed an outrage upon her in Auckland. Screams & shouts sometimes for 3 or 4 hours at a time and then starts singing’. Edith also wrote that Bessie was ‘constantly making great noise’, regularly fouled her bed, ‘often says men have been with her and that she is in the “family way,” and ate ravenously’. On the basis of their evidence she was diagnosed as ‘melancholic’. Once in the asylum her physical condition improved, but not her mental, for she was occasionally violent, in particular breaking windows. She did no work.\textsuperscript{390} Her father paid 7s 6d each week towards her maintenance.\textsuperscript{391} When he died in 1924, the only daughter mentioned in his obituary as still being alive was Mary Alice, although a brother-in-law thought Bessie might still be alive.\textsuperscript{392} Ignored by her sisters, she lived until 30 May 1929, aged 62, dying of senile decay and heart failure. Although she had entered the asylum as a Wesleyan, she was given a Presbyterian funeral.\textsuperscript{393}

In 1906, at Squirrell’s residence at Shaftesbury his third daughter Edith Beatrice ‘quietly celebrated’ her marriage to Joseph Hawkins of \textsuperscript{390} Avondale Asylum, Case Book 1898-1900, folios 103, 168, no. 2353, YCAA 1048/8, ANZ-A.

\textsuperscript{391} Avondale Asylum, Maintenance Payment Register 1885-1899, folio 306, YCAA 1045/1, ANZ-A.

\textsuperscript{392} Te Aroha News, 9 August 1924, p. 4; Joseph Hawkins, Application for a Reception-
Order, 16 May 1924, Case File on John Squirrell, Tokanui Mental Hospital, YCBG 5904/11, file 372, ANZ-A.

\textsuperscript{393} Death Certificate of Constance Elizabeth Squirrell, 30 May 1929, 1929/2486, BDM.
After their honeymoon ‘the married couple will return to the home of the bride, as a partnership arrangement has been made between Mr Hawkins and his father-in-law’; clearly he was to run the farm. Aged 36, ten years older than her husband, Edith would have three sons, who, when she died of measles and pneumonia 12 years after being married, were then aged ten, eight, and six. Her obituary, which made her Squirrell’s second daughter, thereby ignoring the existence of Constance, stated that since coming to Shaftesbury she had ‘been the close companion and friend of her widowed father’, which certainly was the case because she had lived with him until her marriage.

It is only those of us who have known her long, who know and appreciate all the excellent qualities of character and heart she possessed; and faithfully she performed the varied responsibilities imposed upon her. Like the modest violet, she preferred to remain in the shade, and, like it, cast sweet fragrance round to be enjoyed by any who cared to come under its influence. She undoubtedly realised that the highest and best in life is attained through service and sacrifice. Much sympathy is felt for her husband, three little boys and her father in their irreparable loss.

Squirrell’s relations with this son-in-law reached their nadir in April 1920, when he took Hawkins to court on the charge of assaulting him on 3 March ‘by dragging him along the ground and beating his head and body against the ground and against the stock yard fence’ on Hawkins’ Shaftesbury farm. The hearing lasted two hours, the names of the disputants not being made public: after the magistrate heard some of the evidence, he conferred with both men in private, resulting in Squirrell

---

396 Marriage Certificate of Edith Beatrice Squirrell, 15 June 1906, 1906/3156, BDM.
397 Death Certificate of Edith Beatrice Hawkins, 4 June 1918, 1918/12801, BDM.
398 Te Aroha News, 12 June 1918, p. 3; Bay of Plenty Electoral Rolls, 1896, p. 49; 1897, p. 47; 1899, p. 63; 1900, p. 60; Ohinemuri Electoral Rolls, 1902, p. 70; 1903, p. 61; 1905, p. 74.
399 Te Aroha News, 12 June 1918, p. 3.
400 Te Aroha Magistrate’s Court, Criminal Record Book 1919-1921, Hearing of 23 April 1920, BCDG 11220/3a, ANZ-A. withdrawing the charge. 401 This assault may have been the result of Squirrell’s declining mental state. 402

In June 1891, Squirrell’s youngest daughter, Mary Alice, was the first of his children to marry, at the age of 19. Her husband, David Foughey, was 19 years her senior. He was a farmer living at Gordon, had been born in County Cork, and was a Roman Catholic, which may explain why the marriage took place in the Registrar's Office. 403 The children were brought up as Catholics. 404 Perhaps they had met first in July 1890, when he was working for Squirrell on his farm. 405

Foughey had received his land order for the Shaftesbury settlement in September 1881, three months after Squirrell. 406 According to the Cyclopedia of New Zealand (which gave the year of his marriage as 1881, when his bride would have been nine), he worked for Edward Francis Roche at Shaftesbury for eight years before, in July 1887, buying land at Gordon and being one of its first settlers. By 1902, he owned 244 freehold acres, and had ‘planted every tree in the beautiful avenue which leads to his homestead’. They had three daughters and one son. 407

For a period in the mid-1890s Foughey was in very poor health, and the response of the community was typical of many similar cases. In September 1894 he entered the Thames hospital because of a perinephritic abscess, a collection of pus around the kidneys, and remained there for 94 days. 408 In February 1895 he spent seven days in the same hospital with chronic sinus, in August stayed for 20 days because of an abscess of the knee, and in September was hospitalized for 11 days because of an abscess

401 Te Aroha News, 26 April 1920, p. 2.
402 See Tokanui Mental Hospital, Case File on John Squirrell, file 372, YCBG 5904/11, ANZ-A.
403 Thames Hospital, Register of Patients 1884-1901, folios 60, 48, YCAH 14075/1a, ANZ-A [folio 67 recorded him as being Church of England]; Marriage Certificate of Mary Alice Squirrell, 2 June 1891, 1891/302, BDM.
404 For example, Register of Baptisms in the Parish of Te Aroha 1884-1949, no. 236, Catholic Archives, Auckland.
405 John Squirrell, diary, entry for July 1890, Hawkins Family Papers.
406 Register of Land Orders by Messrs Grant and Foster, Te Aroha, Orders dated 21 June 1881, 5 September 1881, Lands and Survey Department, LS 22/2, ANZ-W.
408 Thames Hospital, Register of Patients 1884-1901, folio 60, YCAH 14075/1a, ANZ-A; Oxford Concise Colour Medical Dictionary (Oxford, 1996), pp. 497, 554.
of the back,\textsuperscript{409} possibly a consequence of the earlier infection around the kidneys. As an indication of his financial state, the charitable aid board met the cost of his August hospitalization.\textsuperscript{410} In late June 1895 the \textit{Te Aroha News} reported that he had been forced to take to his bed once more because of the abscess in his side. Having been unable to work for 18 months, ‘in consequence of that and hospital expenses he is about stranded’, and a benefit concert was to be held for him and his wife and two small children.\textsuperscript{411} Just before the concert, which the newspaper urged all to attend, it reported that he had ‘been unable to work for nearly two years, consequently his section has been going back on him, and the family have been obliged to sell off the stock to provide themselves with bread’.\textsuperscript{412} The result was a success, Te Aroha’s public hall being ‘comfortably filled’.\textsuperscript{413} A correspondent’s account provided a good example both of how the community rallied round on such occasions and of the type of entertainment provided:

The case was so deserving of sympathy that a number of settlers at Shaftesbury, assisted by musical residents here, decided to hold this concert to help Mr Foughey, and the effort met with the public appreciation it deserved. The Hall was crowded, and a capital programme was tendered. Mr T[homas] Gavin,\textsuperscript{414} chairman of the Town Board, presided. Both parts of the programme opened with selections by the Te Aroha brass band, which were remarkably well played. The other items on the programme were as follow:- Song, “The Diver,” Mr [Thomas] McIndoe;\textsuperscript{415} pianoforte solo, “Irish Diamonds,” Mr Schroff; song, “At my window,” by Miss Wainwright, who sang particularly well; song, in character, “The Union Jack,” by Mr Hanby; song, “Whisper and I shall hear,” by Miss Hirst (who has a sweet, telling voice), with violin obbligato by Miss Stanley; song, “The Outpost,” Mr Gage-Brown; comic song, Mr Harry Tonge; song, “Swanee River,” by Miss Wainwright, with banjo accompaniment by Mr Ross; song, “They all love Jack,” by Mr Ross; song, “I fear

\textsuperscript{409} Thames Hospital, Register of Patients 1884-1901, folios 64, 67, 68, YCAH 14075/1a, ANZ-A.

\textsuperscript{410} Thames Hospital, Register of Patients 1884-1901, folio 67, YCAH 14075/1a, ANZ-A.

\textsuperscript{411} \textit{Te Aroha News}, 26 June 1895, p. 2.

\textsuperscript{412} \textit{Te Aroha News}, 3 July 1895, p. 2.

\textsuperscript{413} \textit{Te Aroha News}, 6 July 1895, p. 2.

\textsuperscript{414} See paper on his life.

\textsuperscript{415} See paper on his life.
no foe,” by Mr Gage-Brown; song, in character, “The Alabama Coon,” by Miss Craig, with banjo accompaniment by Mr Ross; violin solo by Miss Stanley, who played with great expression; comic song, “I’ve worked eight hours,” by Mr Hanby, who was admirably got up, and made some capital hits; Highland fling by Mr H. Tonge. The accompaniments were well played by Mrs Robson, Miss Wainwright, and Miss Sibley. Dancing was afterwards indulged in for some hours, and a very enjoyable evening spent.416

Subsequently, Foughey thanked all those who had made his benefit ‘so great a success’.417 The sum raised was not stated, but would have assisted the family for a time, and Foughey’s health improved somewhat in future years. He died, aged 68, in 1913 of ‘chronic suppuration’ and asthenia, meaning an abscess and debility, from which he had suffered for ten years.418 He left his widow a freehold property valued at £3,072; she would live until 1963.419

HEALTH, AND DEATH

In the first mention of any health issues affecting him, in August 1889 it was reported that Squirrell had been kicked by a horse but had soon recovered.420 His diary recorded that a foot had been sprained, and not until four-and-a-half months later could he ‘at last put on elastic boots’.421 In April 1891 ‘Rheumatism came on’.422 Then in late 1913 he recorded his ‘First illness in 60 years’, lasting about three months but requiring him to spend a month in the Te Aroha hospital’.423 Two years later he went into a private hospital there and then to a boarding house.424 In March 1919, when he was living at home, ‘Miss Nelson came to keep house, soon vanished, 416 Te Aroha Correspondent, Auckland Weekly News, 13 July 1895, p. 23.

417 Advertisement, Te Aroha News, 10 July 1895, p. 2.
418 Death Certificate of David Foughey, 1913/4416, BDM.
419 Evening Post, 2 February 1915, p. 4; Hamilton Probates, BCDG 4420/322, 4421/464/63, ANZ-A.
420 Te Aroha News, 24 August 1889, p. 2.
421 John Squirrell, diary, entries for 15 August 1889, 1 January 1890, Hawkins Family Papers.
422 John Squirrell, diary, entry for May 1891, Hawkins Family Papers.
423 John Squirrell, diary, entry for September-October 1913, Hawkins Family Papers.
424 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 2, 30 September 1915, Hawkins Family Papers.
with her “brother” (adopted).425 In May, another woman then kept house for him.426 During 1920 he lived for a time both with a friend and in a boarding house.427 But he was still remarkably fit: in September 1921 he recorded having a ‘Giddy fit in [Te Aroha] Domain, after 20 mile walk day before’.428 And in January 1923 ‘went to top429 Te A mountain with youth abt 15? and lady’, whose name he could not recall.430

At the age of 83, on 5 August 1924, he died of bronchitis that had led to pneumonia, in Tokanui Mental Hospital, where he had been admitted three months earlier through ‘senile dementia and loss of memory’ and being ‘very feeble on account of his advanced age’.431 When admitted, he was described as ‘a small spare man in fair bodily health considering his age’. His son-in-law Joseph Hawkins had arranged that he be removed from the ‘Glencairn’ Boarding House at Te Aroha to the asylum ‘as his daughter had not offered to make the application’, perhaps because she did not wish her father to be committed. Squirrell’s memory was such that he could not provide the hospital with any information about his personal history or his family. Hawkins declared that he ‘wanders about and does not recognise anyone. Mind a blank. Would wander off at night into the Domain at Te Aroha to be found there at night by the local Police. Did not know the landlady after having been with her for two years’. As there had been three previous attacks, details unrecorded, the mayor, a solicitor, and a local farmer had been watching over him.432 On his first night in the asylum ward he complained that he could not sleep because of the noise, despite being the one making it; he also said that he could not sleep because of the bright light, but it was in darkness.433

425 John Squirrell, diary, entry for 24 March 1919, Hawkins Family Papers.
426 John Squirrell, diary, entry for May 1919, Hawkins Family Papers.
427 John Squirrell, diary, entries for 7 June, 28 August, 8, 12 October 1920, Hawkins Family Papers.
428 John Squirrell, diary, entry for September 1921, Hawkins Family Papers.
429 Underlined three times.
430 John Squirrell, diary, entry for January 1923, Hawkins Family Papers.
431 Death Certificate of John Squirrell, 5 August 1924, 1924/5244, BDM; Inquest on John Squirrell, Justice Department, J 46, 1924/857, ANZ-W.
432 Joseph Hawkins, Application for a Reception-Order, 16 May 1924, Tokanui Mental Hospital, Case File on John Squirrell, file 372, YCBG 5904/11, ANZ-A.
433 Note by James Ian Robert Gray, 16 May 1924, Tokanui Mental Hospital, Case File on John Squirrell, file 372, YCBG 5904/11, ANZ-A.
CONCLUSION

A brief obituary stated that ‘his wife predeceased him some years ago’, an under-estimation, and made mention mainly of his Shaftesbury store and interest in Esperanto.\textsuperscript{434} It could also have noted the multiplicity of his attempts to earn a living, of which his mining ventures were the least successful. His involvement in mining had been prompted by the reports of valuable silver ore being found in the Tui district, but like so many others taking up mining at some stage of their lives, he was quite unskilled in geology or in mining techniques. What he called mining was really prospecting, with he along with his partners hoping to discover good reefs to enable them to sell their properties for a quick profit; there was no indication that he intended to abandon shop-keeping and farming to become a miner. His years as a merchant’s clerk in London were not a good preparation for becoming a farmer, but he was capable of learning. Although aided for a time by his sister and daughters, having two daughters with mental problems must have made his life very difficult for some years. Squirrell wrote in 1893 that his ‘object in life is to see my children settle comfortably & safely’,\textsuperscript{435} and he did his best, although he ended up leaving such a small estate that no duty was levied on it.\textsuperscript{436}

His diary and letters reveal a passionate man who took political and religious liberty seriously, and was never afraid to speak his mind. These sources reveal his opinions and his personality, which for most now-obscure people have been largely lost to posterity through lack of information.

Appendix

Figure 1: ‘Map of Gordon Settlement’, Terese McLoughlin and Gladys Davison, \textit{Gordon Centenary 1884-1984} (Matamata, 1984), p. 3: John Squirrell had Sections 5 and 5A in Block X, Mary Foughey had Section 25A in Block VII, and in 1897 David Foughey acquired Section 24 in Block VII.

\footnote{Te Aroha News, 9 August 1924, p. 4.}
\footnote{John Squirrell to Commissioner of Crown Lands, 1 December 1893, Lands and Survey Department, BAAZ 1108/103a, ANZ-A.}
\footnote{Testamentary Register 1924-1925, BBCB 4208/17, folio 375, ANZ-A.}